Seven Women, Children Are Shot At Beauty School By Youth; 5 Die

Got Idea From Recent Mass Slayings In US

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Seven women and children, forced to lie face down on a beauty shop floor like spokes in a wheel, were shot methodically by a high school senior Saturday. Five died.

Robert Benjamin Smith, 18, taken laughing from the salon, told police Sgt. Ray Gomez he got the idea from recent mass killings in Chicago and Austin, Tex.

Gomez said Smith freely admitted the shooting and told of stabbing his youngest victim, Debra Sellers, 3½, "a couple of times" when she "kept jumping around."

Debra's 3-month-old sister, Tamara Lynn, escaped with a bullet wound in the arm. Police said she either crawled under her mother, Joyce Sellers, 27, or the mother threw herself on the tot.

The other victims were Mrs. Sellers; Carol Farmer, 19, wife of a serviceman stationed in Alaska; and two student operators, Mary Maryaret Olsen, 18, and Glenda Carter, 18.

The seventh girl, Bonita Sue Harris, 18, an employe, was seriously wounded in the head.

Smith, who moped to this central Arizona town near Phoenix from Houston, Mo., 3½ years ago, had no record of trouble at Mesa High School.

But he told Gomez he had been planning a mass killing ever since his parents gave him the 22-caliber pistol for target practice three months ago.

After discarding the idea of suffocating his victims because plastic sandwich bags he bought were too small, Gomez said, the youth entered the beauty shop Saturday, forced his victims to a back room and calmly shot each of them twice.

Two of the victims died on the floor, the other three at a hospital.

Fear That Tainted Food May Be Sold

Consumers Could Be Endangered If Goods Reach Market

ROME (AP) — Fear grew in Italy on Saturday that flood-tainted food from the agricultural area inundated in the Italian floods might find its way into commercial markets and endanger the health of consumers.

At Ravenna, south of Venice, health officials reported a poultry company had attempted to include 300 flood-drowned chickens in a shipment for export. Authorities would not say for what country or countries the halted shipments were destined.

The floood-stricken area was Italy's most important cattle land and 50,000 head of beef were reported drowned. A Rome butcher commented: "With all this meat lost, there probably will be a sharp rise in meat prices all over Italy, and then a general shortage."

Carcasses of of cattle, pigs, sheep, and poultry dotted the countryside or lay submerged under water standing in fields and barnyards.

Soldiers labored to bury or burn the bodies. The Interior Ministry ordered more men on the job and told public security forces to send frogmen protected by rubber suits and masks into high water areas to help in the disposal operation.

As the massive cleanup moved ahead in most of the stricken central and north sections of Italy, he situation remained perilous for many communities in the Dolomite Alps north of Venice.

Eight days after the worst of the flooding occurred, scattered landslides continued to endanger life and property and a moving mountain of mud threatened to obligerate several villages. Loosened by the floods and heavy rains, masses of earth carrying boulders and uprooted trees piled around the villages of Mezzano, Fiera di Primiero and Imer in the Cismon Valley.

The three villages have a total of 3,472 residents.

"We are living through a real drama," said Mezzano Mayor Donato Zuliani. "We are trapped. On the one side we are threatened by the mud slide and on the other side we have no roads. They were wiped out by the floods."

Squabble Between Allies

Green Beret Recreation Club Shot Up By Rangers

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — A squabble between allies led South Vietnamese government rangers to shoot up a recreation club of the U.S. Green Beret Special Forces team at Hon Quan Saturday and two Americans were wounded, reliable sources said.

An isolated case in a complicated war, tempers flared at that post 70 miles north of Saigon as:

—The U.S. Command announced the loss of eight American aircraft and heavy casualties among their crewmen Friday — five planes over North Viet Nam and three helicopters in the South.

—U.S. infantrymen pressed in a rain their massive hunt in War Zone C northwest of Saigon for the Viet Cong, whose mortarmen shelled forward command posts of the 1st and 25th divisions and the 196th Light Infantry Brigade in the night. B52 jets again loosed tons of bombs on Communist holdings in that territory adjoining the Cambodian frontier. Through Friday the Americans had counted 928 enemy dead.

—In the military-political field, Premier Nguyen Cao Ky was reported ready to remove Lt. Gen. Dang Van Quang as commander of the 4th Corps area, which embraces the populous, rice-rich Mekong River delta.

Quang was cool toward the recent introduction there of American troops, expected eventually on a big scale, though his own men have made little progress in driving guerrilla battalions from the delta.

The specific cause of the Hon Quan outburst was obscure, though there have been reports of friction between some Vietnamese rangers and U.S. troops in that rubber-growing region for several weeks. By one account an American was clubbed to death there recently and a Vietnamese soldier was beaten up in retaliation.

Reliable sources said the rangers used two armored personnel carriers, part of the equipment supplied them by the United States, to crack open a wall of the recreation club and then fired into the building with automatic weapons.

Spokesmen at U.S. military headquarters in Saigon said they had no information about the incident. Thirty-five Special Forces men are among about 70 Americans based at Hon Quan.

Destruction of the five planes Friday boosted to 426 the announced number of such losses over North Viet Nam. The single-day toll was exceeded only once, when North Vietnamese gunners felled seven planes last Aug. 7.

Republican Gains Could Stop Boost

Question Of Tax Hike Still Open; Depends On War

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican gains in the new Congress could lessen the possibility of a tax increase next year to help fight the war in Viet Nam.

But as far as the Johnson administration is concerned, the question is still open and still depends on how much the war will cost, especially the extra money requested in January to continue the fight through the current fiscal year.

Some sources Saturday saw the increased number of Republican faces in the new Congress — the GOP picked up 47 House seats — as indicating a greater insistence on cuts in nondefense spending.

Such a move could reduce the need for new taxes, if President Johnson should decide a tax increase is needed.

The administration is already trying to cut spending as much as possible without harming what it considers essential domestic programs but Republicans next year might insist on even deeper cuts.

One key Republican, Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, has said the GOP gains will force the President to abandon any effort to seek a tax increase to curb inflation. He had predicted earlier the President would request a 10 per cent hike.

If the Republican-Democratic balance in committee assignments reflects the GOP gains in the House, both the Ways and Means and Appropriations committees could take on a more conservative tone — controlled by a combination of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

It is Ways and Means Committee's assignment to initiate any tax bill.

Even before Tuesday's election, government sources said the chance of the administration proposing a tax increase to Congress in January had lessened

Standarized Chow Sought For Services

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has a new unification goal for the armed services: He wants to standardize chow.

Officials of the Pentagon's newly established Directorate for Food Services said Saturday one of their first tasks will be to push through a regulation putting the Army, Navy and Air Force on an equal food allowance basis as of next July 1, the beginning of fiscal 1968.

Right now sailors get bigger meals.

The Navy, under a 1933 law, is allowed 20 ounces of meat per man daily, 1.2 eggs and 44 ounces of fresh vegetables. The Air Force and Army, whose eating habits are regulated by presidential order, get 18 ounces of meat a day, one egg and 21 ounces of vegetables. In fact, the only similar service rations are the daily allotments of coffee, milk, and flour.

Despite this, sources said the Air Force and Army aren't completely sure they want the new food directorate to tell them how much food to serve.

"We're having some difficulty getting through to people," acknowledged Navy Capt. James A. Warren, director of food services. "But all we want to do is bring the Army and Air Force up to the same high standard as the Navy.

"The services all won't have to serve the same menu."

Once the services are all on the same food standard, Warren said, the food directorate "will have an opportunity to evaluate and improve all standards. There's no way in the world to evaluate now."

To this effect, an executive order describing the new Army and Air Force food allotments now is circulating at the Bureau of the Budget, which must approve it, and later will be sent to the service secretaries for their approval.

Unlike most McNamara unification projects, this one will cost the Defense Department money. The armed services currently are allowed about $1.1 billion annually for food and allowances; the higher standards will add an estimated $6 million to that total, Warren said.

Why were the Navy's standards fixed by law 33 years ago? "We've never been able to find out," the food officer said.

Barbers Arrested On Veterans Day

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP) — Police arrested seven barbers Friday for violating a city ordinance that prohibits beauty shops and barber shops from operating on Veterans Day.

Two of the barbers—William D. Sisco and his son, Billy G. Sisco—said today they planned to make a court test of the ordinance.

Police arrested the seven at four different Cape Girardeau barber shops. A court date was not set. The ordinance provides for maximum penalties of a $100 fine or 30 days in jail.

"This ordinance is discriminatory against the barbers and beauticians. They are the only ones mentioned in the law," said the elder Sisco.

Satellite Launched

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union Saturday launched the 131st unmanned earth satellite in its Cosmos series, started in 1962. The brief announcement of the launching said the satellite was functioning normally.

The purpose of Cosmos satellites is described here as scientific research, but Western experts have said some of them are part of a Soviet spy-in-the-sky program.

Prelude To Space Walk:

Gemini 12 Pilots Explore Secrets Of Outer Space

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — An awed, star-gazing shutterbug, Edwin E. (Buz) Aldrin Jr. poked head and shoulders out the roof of his spaceship for more than two hours Saturday as the Gemini 12 pilots spent an exotic day exploring heavenly secrets.

Whipping him 42,000 miles through an ocean of void, Aldrin's excursion became a smooth, chatty prelude to an even more action-packed day Sunday. Then he will stage a searching, two-hour walk to see how well man can work outside.

The sun, moon and stars, plus the world beneath them, held the astronauts' interests after pesky problems with a target rocket linked to their nose seemed to have disappeared.

Aldrin and his champion flying partner, James A. Lovell Jr., skillfully chased the moon across the face of the sun, capitalizing on an opportunity to snap man's first, perhaps most revealing, pictures of a rare solar eclipse from space.

"What did I tell you, Buzz?" Lovell asked his rookie pilot as Aldrin hung outside. "Four days vacation with pay and see the world."

"Yeah!" Aldrin replied, with a hearty laugh.

For about 2 hours and 20 minutes, Aldrin's hatch stayed open, exposing both men to hostilities of space. With Lovell guiding the ship, Aldrin spent the time snapping scientific pictures of selected star fields, like the Milky Way.

Their biggest thrill, though, came as they sped over the United States.

"Pretty clouds down there," Aldrin told mission control as they flashed toward Texas. "How's the weather in Houston?"

"It's cloudy. We have a front laying just off the coast."

"I think I can see it. Tell everybody to smile down there."

"We're smiling!"

When Aldrin first stood up, bundled snugly in a bulky spacesuit with oxygen hoses keeping him tied to the seat, he noted: "It looks like I have a small tendency to float out, but very little. I'm completely free. I push myself away and it feels better."

Gazing into the boundless area of space, he spotted strips dangling from the rear of Gemini 12. They apparently had not been cut clean when the spacecraft separated from the booster rocket.

"We've got some of that primer cord hanging around the aft (rear)," he said. "Looks like I'll have to pull some of that stuff away when I get back there."

His spacewalk, designed to probe baffling questions uncovered by strollers before him, will take him to the rear where a "work bench" is designed with simple tasks for him. He might have to snip some of the cord to keep from getting tangled.

Aldrin used an ultraviolet camera mounted on the side of the spacecraft to take the pictutes of star fields, mainly Cassiopeia and Sirius. Relative to the rest of the universe, these fields are believed to be young — about 10 million years old — and pictures from space might give hints to their origin.

Their main jobs completed, the astronauts turned to taking photos of each other.

Opposed By Officials

Christmas Truce To Be Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any call issued by Pope Paul VI for a Christmas truce in Viet Nam is assured of sympathetic consideration in Washington, but Johnson administration officials are strongly opposed to another prolonged, one-sided pause in bombing North Viet Nam.

As President Johnson and his top advisers see it, the aerial offensive against the North is one of the most potent instruments they have for bringing about peace negotiations or scaling down the Vietnamese conflict. They insist that any pause must be justified by some move toward peace from the Communist side.

As Johnson put it Friday: "We are very anxious to always give consideration, and as sympathetic as possible, to any suggestion the Pope gives, as we did last year. But we are also anxious to have other people do likewise."

This comment, a restatement of a news conference remark of a week earlier, was made as he and roving Ambassador, W. Averell Harriman talked with newsmen at the Johnson ranch in Texas.

The U.S. attitude does not rule out a Christmas lull in the fighting. It does, however, appear to bar any repetition of the 37-day suspension of air strikes against North Viet Nam such as grew out of the Christmas truce a year ago.

The one exception would be some indication from North Viet Nam, perhaps through the Soviet Union, that a decision by Johnson halting the bombing would bring immediate, responsive steps from the Communists. The word from Hanoi would probably be clothed in diplomatic secrecy, but U.S. officials say there has been no such indication so far.

Harriman said Friday "we are hopeful" that some sign of progress toward peace talks will emerge from Moscow discussions next month between the Soviets and the British.

Indeed, the lack of any demonstrated interest on North Viet Nam's part in easing or ending the conflict is seen by Washington officials as the fatal flaw in the new surge of peace efforts which has developed in the last few days.

These developments included a strong indication from the Vatican Press Office in Rome that Pope Paul will call again for a Christmas cease-fire. The appeal he issued last year resulted in a lull in the fighting and with that as a start Johnson built his own actions into a peace offensive that produced a 37-day pause in the bombing of the North.

The United States had been told that a long pause in the bombing would result in progress toward peace on the part of North Viet Nam, but no such result was forthcoming and in late January Johnson resumed air strikes. Officials said the Communists had taken advantage of the suspension in air strikes to step up the movement of men and supplies into South Viet Nam.

Now that the U. S. elections are over and a new year approaches, the President seems certain to face increasing pressures for new peace gestures.

One reason is that Johnson's own advisers have said for weeks that following the U.S.

SS Benefit Hike Could Be Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's anticipated troubles with rebounding Republicans may take a reverse twist when he asks the 90th Congress to increase Social Security benefits.

GOP leaders have been breathing fire since Tuesday's election victories about hacking away at spending programs but they may decide to go Johnson one better in boosting retirement pay for the elderly.

This would give their party at the outset of what is likely to be a tumultous session a chance to demonstrate its interest in a bloc of voters it would like to have in its corner in the 1968 presidential election.

Johnson has said he plans to seek an increase of at least 10 per cent in Social Security benefits. He has not said how he will propose to finance it.

But if the President doesn't beat them to it, Republicans are likely to come up with a proposal to raise the minimum payment from the present $44 a month to $70.

The administration has opposed any increase of this scale in the past and Republican sponsors have never been able to get it adopted. But they have added strength now and may be able to enlist enough Democratic support to put it over, even though financing of the increase presumably would come out of general Treasury revenues rather than from new Social Security taxes.

Johnson has yet to decide whether to ask for an income tax increase to help finance the mounting costs of the Viet Nam war. He has mentioned the possibility that climbing revenues may make this unnecessary.

If the President does seek a tax boost, the Republicans may have to dig up some new reasons for opposing it, particularly if it promises to reduce the

Significant GOP Gains

Election Proves Missouri Closer To 2-Party State

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—If the general election proved anything, it showed that Missouri is closer to being a two-party state than it has been for many years.

Even though the state's voters bucked the national Republican ground-swell and retained top Democrats in office — state auditor and eight of the 10 incumbent congressmen — there significant local GOP gains.

Who ever would have predicted the Republicans could win control of the Clay County courthouse? Or elect a presiding judge in Audrain County and a state representative in Boone County, both in the heart of Democratic "Little Dixie?"

Or for that matter, who would have predicted that Lawrence K. Roos would win re-election as St. Louis County supervisor by such a big margin?

He was the favorite going into the election, but the size of his victory swept many Republicans in with him, and assured continued GOP control of the county government—the biggest voting unit in the state.

One of the upsets there was the victory of young Gen McNary for county prosecuting attorney over Glennon T. Moran, former state liquor control supervisor who had the support of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and his aides.

The size of the Roos victory has encouraged Missouri Republicans to think they might have a chance of electing him for governor in 1968 over Hearnes.

But if the Republicans are going to take advantage of their gains, they must restructure their party and get the same kind of vote-getting organization going that the Democrats have had for years. And they must also raise the money to do the job.

You can't hire precinct workers for peanuts any more—and that's about all the Republicans have had in recent years. You can't canvass the voters and get them registered without spending some money.

As a starter, the party might take a look at the unprecedented victory of George Parker for state representative in Boone County. He is executive director of GOP state headquarters and knows how to organize a campaign as he just proved in his personal triumph.

If Roos becomes a candidate for governor, his campaign chairman undoubtedly would be Elmer J. Meyer, St. Louis County GOP chairman who has taken care of the political end while Roos looked after the tan-

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has asked the Soviet Union to furnish information about its Oct. 27 underground nuclear explosion at the arctic island of Novaya Zemlya.

State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey said Friday John M. Leedy, assistant secretary of state for European affairs, had called in Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin and requested the information.

Some observers said the move was a low-key diplomatic reminder that the test-ban treaty forbids atomic fallout that spreads across national boundaries. Apparently some radioactive material sprayed out far enough to be detected by U.S. devices.

U.S. minitors recorded the last explosion at around a million tons of TNT equivalent, which would make it the largest underground explosion ever reported.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high Justice Department official says more Southern Negroes voted in Tuesday's election than in any election since Reconstruction days.

Although no over-all figures are available, the official said Friday, the Negro vote in the South "reflected a milestone on the road to putting racial voting discrimination behind the nation once and for all."

The official, who declined the use of his name, said a few complaints had been registered with the Justice Department and are being investigated. Otherwise, he said, the elections throughoutt he South went off smoothly.

The official said a little less than 50 per cent of Negroes in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia and South Carolina are registered to vote, but a large percentage of these did vote.

Justice Department figures show that since enactment of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, the number of Negroes registered in the five Deep South states has gone up from 687,000 to 1.15 million — a percentage increase from 28.6 per cent to 47.8 per cent of the voting age Negro population.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Aerospace Industries Association says government and the aircraft industry should join in efforts to produce sturdier and safer airliners.

But the AIA cautioned Friday against any rule changes that are not for the purpose of correcting specific airplane faults.

It endorsed Federal Aviation Agency objectives to establish new safety rules that take full advantage of modern aircraft thechnology to correct specifically identified shortcomings.

But it said some FAA proposals either are in conflict with available data or are not based on experimental evaluation.

Election Board Asked For Ballot Recount

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Truman Branscum, Republican, officially asked the Oklahoma election board Friday for a recount of all ballots in the 4th Congressional District race where Democrat Tom Steed won re-election.

Basil Wilson, board secretary, said a time for the recount will be set after talking with both sides and the district judge who will be in charge. Branscum appeared at the board office in the capitol and paid his $2,500 recount fee.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Two alleged cattle rustlers were arrested and 17 head of whiteface steers were recovered Saturday by Independence police.

The animals were stolen from a farm near Henrietta, Mo., and the truck in which they were being hauled had been taken from a firm at Windsor, Mo.

Police identified the two men as Alva J. Cameron, Jr., 24, North Kansas City, and Ronald R. Webb, 17, Independence. They are being held for questioning by officers from Ray and Lafayette counties.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Neutral Austria's plans for close links with the West European Common Market may be a key issue next week in talks between visiting Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Austrian leaders.

Podgorny is to arrive Monday on his first official trip abroad since he became head of state last December.

An informed source said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, in a recent meeting with Toncic at the United Nations, warned that his government would consider any form of Austrian assocation with the Common Market incompatible with the country's neutral status.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Communist Hungary has announced a change in election laws in time for next year's parliamentary elections to give voters a choice of candidates but not of political parties.

Dr. Ferenc Erdei, a government spokesman, told Parliament Friday, "In a Socialist country, no change of regime is offered to the voters at elections."

But he added, "the voters, when casting their ballots for or against one or another candidate, in fact pass their judgment over the people's regime as well."

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea plans to provide its own "peace corps" next year to help South Viet Nam in its pacification program, government sources said today.

A tentative plan calls for sending about 10,000 civilian engineers, technicians and armed forces reservists to South Viet Nam, the sources said.

The proposed "peace corps" would eventually have about 20,000 members, incuding about 7,000 Korean civilians already in Viet Nam, the sources said.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Some 800 students gathered across from President Sukarno's palace Thursday to listen to Sutomo, a former army general turned student leader, gently mock President Sukarno.

The meeting was interrupted at one point when two students began fighting. Dozens of knives were pulled by other students in preparation for a bigger brawl, but the fight did not spread.

US Watching Hot Struggle Within China

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are watching closely for the outcome of what now appears to be a bitter struggle within Communist China's hierarchy.

State Department authorities say it is evident that strong opposition has developed to the policies of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

For months there has been an internal questioning of Mao's foreign policy, a debate on military policy and disagreements on basic economic policy.

Debate within the Chinese Communist party is not new, experts here say. The leadership, drawn from persons who have been comrades in arms for 30 years, has permitted this relationship.

But these experts add that party leadrs always had been able to reach a consensus — until last spring. At that time the issues became so varied and exxtensive, and there was so much disagreement, that the party Central Committee was unable to reach a consensus.

According to this view, Mao then created the Red Guard to stir up the so-called great cultural revolution and at the same time provide a shakedown in the leadership.

Official sources here take the view that opposition elements within the Chinese Communist party have been strong enough to resist Mao, even with the added impact of the Red Guard. What now has developed, it appears here, is an impasse in which the party has been able to counter every blow dealt by Mao and the more extremist segment of the leadership.

Mao has been telling visitors for some years that he was worried that the next generation was drifting away from Maoism. He said he felt revolutionary zeal could come only from revolutionary warfare, and when the situation did not provide such warfare, some means of inducing it had tobe found.

The Red Guard consequently has been used as a weapon to revive revolutionary zeal.

Among the leaders of the resistance to Mao, informed sources here consider Liu Shao-chi, chief of state and former heir apparent to Mao, as one of the most prominent.

Another is Teng Hsio-ping, secretary general of the Communist party who now may have replaced by Kang Sheng, an active party worker. There has been no announcement on Teng's removal.

Agreement At Westinghouse Tentative

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators have reached a tentative agreement on national issues affecting a Westinghouse Electric Corp. labor dispute that threatens to extend a 30-plant strike to a third major defense facility.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service announced the tentative pact Friday night, but said the firm and the AFL-CIO International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers still have to come to terms on local issues.

The mediation service declined to reveal terms of the national agreement, but said it contained wages and certain other benefits.

It was not learned whether the national agreement would meet a union demand for a company-wide contract. Its members who work for Westinghouse now negotiate on a plant-by-plant basis.

Because of this, the 8,000 electrical workers striking some 30 Westinghouse plants could continue their 12-day walkout until the local issues are ironed out. Two of the plants are engaged in substantial defense work.

Electrical workers at Westinghouse's Baltimore Aerospace Division are to decide over the weekend whether to strike that major defense facility. The union had extended the Baltimore contract to midnight Sunday. Electronic equipment for controlling the firing of weapons by fighter planes used n Viet Nam are made at the plant.

The national agreement was reached just before midnight and ended three days of intensive negotiations at the Mediation Service offices here.

The company said it had offered a three-year contract including wage increases of 11.5 cents an hour acrosst he board the first year, pay hikes ranging from 6 to 12 cents in the second and third years and pension, insurance and other fringe benefit improvements.

90 Percent of Pupils In Washington Negro

WASHINGTON (AP) — The percentage of Negro pupils in Washington's public schools now stands at 90.8, authorities report.

A total of 148,149 students was enrolled as of October this year.

Slightly more than 13,000 of this year's students are white.

Perhaps its all those bars of milk chocolate that she nibbles.

There in the panda pit, Chi-Chi lived quite happily, lazing in the sun or hiding from the English smog in her indoor, heated and air-conditioned den.

Then a couple of years ago, zoologists began worrying about the future of the giant panda population. It is believed there are very few still living in the wild so the Chinese government issued an order strictly protecting the few that remain.

There are only about a dozen pandas in captivity. Eight of these are in the Peking Zoo, where they have twice bred baby giant pandas. Another four or five are believed to be in other Chinese zoos.

Outside of China there are only two — An-An, a male, in Moscow, and Chi-Chi in London.

About two years ago the Russians and the British began, independently to consider the possibilities of breeding their pandas.

Again international politics came into the picture. There was a split between the Russians and the Chinese Communists. Since the Russians couldn't get together with the Chinese to breed pandas, they agreed to cooperate with the British.

So for seven months this year, Chi-Chi visited with An-An in Moscow. After a bit of bother at the start, when An-An attacked Chi-Chi, the two got on well together — but they didn't mate.

Now the London Zoo hopes that talks between the British and Soviet governments will lead to An-An visiting Chi-Chi in London next spring for another attempt at mating.

Meanwhile, in Hong Kong, the Communist newspaper Ta Kung Pao claimed the attempted mating was really the great panda plot, suggesting it was staged for the sake of the United States.

"America", the paper said, "has long wanted a panda. The lack of trade relations between China and America has deprived the United States of having a panda.

"If a baby panda were born in Moscow it would need no certificate of origin to go to the United States."

Chinese See A Plot

Only Free World Panda Has Diplomatic Problems

LONDON (AP) — Once upon a time, in the most inaccessible mountains of the Szechwan Province of China, there was born a little baby panda. It was a cuddly thing, all fluffy black and white fur, and it had no idea it was going to grow up to be a cold war ambassador between East and West, and denounced by the Chinese Communists as an American lackey.

This baby panda was captured by a Chinese collecting team on American Independence Day, July 4, 1957, when she was about six months old. They took her on a train to Peking Zoo where she was cared for by a beautiful Chinese girl who lived with her day and night.

The Chinese called this baby panda Chi-Chi, which means "naughty, mischievous little girl." For that is what she was, a little furry bundle of fun.

There were two other giant pandas in Peking Zoo at that time. They were older than Chi-Chi, so they were kept apart from her and she lived in an enclosure of her own.

One day in 1957 an animal collector named Heini Demmer, who lived in Nairobi — that's in Africa — was commissioned by an American zoo to negotiate an exchange of wild animals krom East Africa for one giant panda.

So he took a large collection of big and small animals, some ferocious and some not so ferocious, and set off for China. There for a long time he talked with the Chinese and eventually an exchange was arranged. The Chinese may not have known the exchange was for the United States.

The Chinese took the African animals and told Demmer he could have any one of the three giant pandas in the Peking Zoo. For days and days the animal collector watched the three giant pandas and then, at last, he chose Chi-Chi, the youngest, and took her into his charge May 5, 1958.

Then, international politics came into Chi-Chi's life.

The United States had never had diplomatic relations with the Communist Chinese government in Peking. And the American government had imposed a ban on the import of all Communist Chinese goods.

Pity poor Chi-Chi! Because she was born in China, poor Chi-Chi couldn't get an import license to enter the United States. So, accompanied by Demmer, she went on a tour of European zoos, traveling by train, car and air plane.

On Sept. 5, 1958, Chi-Chi came to visit the London Zoo — initially for a three-week visit. But she so captured the hearts of everyone that the Zoological Society, which had lost its fourth and last giant panda eight years previously, wanted to buy her from Demmer.

The price paid by the society and its friends was never disclosed — but Chi-Chi is today valued at $36,000.

A special panda pit was constructed for Chi-Chi with a water pool, rocks and logs on which she dozes in the daytime, and a swing.

Chi-Chi, who is fond of eating bamboo leaves and a mash of rice, milk, apples, bananas, vitamins, glucose and boiled chicken, now weighs 235 pounds.

Red Craft Accompany Orbiter 2

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — America's Lunar Orbiter 2 — on a mission to take pictures of 13 possible astronaut landing sites — has company in lunar orbit — three Soviet spacecraft.

But scientists said Thursday after the 850-pound craft was locked in orbit that there is no danger of collision or radio interference.

Scientists at Jet Propulsion Laboratory who are controlling the craft ordered a braking rocket to be fired for 10 minutes Thursday, slowing Orbiter 2 from 3,126 miles an hour to 2,678 and allowing it to slip into an orbit 1,147 to 119 miles high.

The Soviet craft in lunar orbit are Luna 10, Luna 11 and Luna 12, also sent to scout landing sites. The first two sent no pictures but Luna 12 has transmitted photos taken from an altitude of 62 miles.

Orbiter 2 will circle the moon every three hours and 40 minutes until Nov. 17 while controllers plot its track and study the moon's gravitational field.

Then the orbit will be altered to bring the spacecraft within 28 miles of the lunar surface when the picture taking begins Nov. 18.

Georgians Must Choose New Governor

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The state of Georgia has been put on deadline to find a legal solution to choosing a new governor — other than allowing the legislature to choose between Republican Howard H. Callaway and Democrat Lester G. Maddox.

A three-judge federal panel said Friday that if the state fails to present a plan by Nov. 25, the court will provide the remedy.

This raised the possibility of a runoff election under a 1964 state law within the next month.

Neither candidate received a majority of votes, required by the Georgia constitution for victory, because of a strong write-in vote for former Gov. Ellis G. Arnall.

Arnall, a moderate Democrat, was defeated by Maddox, a segregationist, in the Democratic primary.

The formal court order was delayed until next Tuesday, but the judges made it clear that the court would not allow the General Assembly to decide the deadlocked race.

The judges, commenting from the bench, said a legislative election of a governor would violate the U.S. Constitution and the Supreme Court decisions on one man, one vote.

With all of the state's 1,893 precincts reported but with an undetermined number of absentee ballots still uncounted, Maddox had 447,426 votes, Callaway 445,832 and Arnall 57,699.

After the court ruled, Maddox said he had no prediction of the outcome of the court action and would not comment until the final verdict was in.

Earlier, Maddox advocated an election by the legislature which has more than four-fifths Democrats.

Election

Normally a governorship candidate's campaign manager becomes the party state chairman, which would mean that Meyer would replace Dorman L. Steelman of Salem, who did a herculean task of campaigning before the general election.

Steelman can take some of the credit for the unexpectedly strong showing of the Republican candidate for state auditor. Rep. William T. Zimmerman of Warrenton, who had State Auditor Haskell Homan more worried this time than any of his previous rivals.

What about the governor's role in the election?

He campaigned around the state for many of his friends and tried hard to disassociate his state administration from the apparent dissatisfaction with the national administration—and apparently succeeded.

He has not formally announced that he is a candidate for a second term but has been running hard in that direction.

His next test will be in the 1967 legislature and the first round in that battle will be the fight over speakership of the House.

There Rep. Thomas D. Graham, D-Jefferson City, is seeking to be the first man ever to serve four straight terms. The governor's man is Rep. James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, who was first elected to the House in 1960.

The issue will be decided at a Democratic caucus of House members later this month at a date not yet set. Both sides claim they have the votes for victory.

Running for speaker pro tem are Rep. James I. Spainhower, D-Marshall, a minister of the Christian Church, and Rep. Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann, a member of the Steamfitters' Union.

Republican

since August but it was still "in the realm of possibility."

Johnson has consistently left the door open and said the question would be determined largely by the cost of the Viet Nam war and by how much nondefense spending can be cut.

Factors being considered by the administration in arriving at its decision are still mixed and, in some cases, pulling in opposite directions.

The cost of the war, for example, has soared beyond the administration's expectations as outlined in its budget to Congress for the current fiscal year which began July 1. But so have government tax receipts.

Estimates of the extra funds to be sought for Viet Nam in January have ranged up to $17 billion but there are indications the request might not exceed 10 billion to $12 billion.

This would be supplemental to any funds the President requested to continue the war beyond June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Johnson has said he expects to make a decision early next month. His council of Economic Advisers, in a report made public by the Texas White House before the election, noted an easing in high interest rates and predicted further declines in food prices.

SS Benefit

government deficit, come close to budget-balance and lessen inflationary pressures.

Rep. Melvin R. Laird of Wisconsin, chairman of the House Republican Conference, mentioned the possibility of "an equitable tax increase" while plugging also for reduction of expenditures on existing "Great Society" programs.

Johnson has recognized that the primary difficulties he will encounter because of the increased Republican strength will stem from coalition GOP-Southern Democratic efforts to scuttle some of these programs and pare others down.

He added Republican muscle obviously is going to hinder any presidential effort to push through legislation organized labor wanted — and didn't get — in the 89th Congress.

There is unlikely to be, for example, any legislation fixing federal standards for the payment of unemployment compensation. No bill to outlaw state bans on the union shop is likely to see daylight.

Civil rights will continue to provide controversy, particularly if Johnson again recommends the open housing provision which caused his friend, Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, to lead the fight which killed the bill this year.

The President still has on the shelf a bag of odds and ends which may fare no better than they did in the 89th, when they were bypassed.

These include truth in lending, gun control, Electoral College reform, campaign financing and hospital modernization legislation.

Former Prison Inmate Is Robbery Victim

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The man whose case freed 1,500 convicts across the country has again become news — this time as a robbery victim.

Clarence Earl Gideon was an inmate of a Florida prison in 1963 when he sent a hand-written appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, telling that body he had been convicted without legal counsel. He was serving a five-year sentence for breaking and entering at the time.

The Supreme Court handed down a historic decision requiring counsel in felony trials which freed prisoners in every state.

Gideon made headlines here Thursday when the gasoline station where he works was robbed of about $75 while he was on duty. No arrests have been made.

The question of how the North Vietnamese will evaluate the actual results of last Tuesday's voting is unanswerable here, officials say, though U.S. spokesman have insisted that it was no repudiation of the present line on Viet Nam.

Contaminated Product Withdrawn by Kroger

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Kroger Co. has withdrawn one day's production of its "Kroger's Instant Non-Fat Dry Milk" because the firm's own tests showed traces of bacteria (Salmonella).

A Kroger spokesman said the directive went out Oct. 28 to 11 of the chain's 27 divisions to which the product was shipped. He emphasized that the action was voluntary, a precautionary measure, and that there had been no federal order to withdraw the product.

The Food and Drug Administration in Washington verified that it had issued no instructions or orders on the chain's product.

Kroger said the divisions from which it was withdrawn were Atlanta, Chicago, Cleveland, Columbus, Dallas, Grand Rapids, Mich., Indianapolis, Little Rock, Louisville, Nashville and Pittsburgh.

Collection Of Clothing For Needy

Thanksgiving-time in America has come to be known as that time when, under the auspices of the Bishops of the United States, millions of Catholics and other Americans of good will, from Maine to California and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, go through their closets selecting the best they can spare in the way of useable clothing, blankets, bedding and shoes, as a gift for their less fortunate neighbors overseas. Many, in addition, make cash donations in order to enable the Bishops' agency to purchase the most urgently needed items.

Those wishing to participate in this program are asked to bring usable clothing to the basement of Sacred Heart School on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday of this week. The following items, in order of priority are needed: clothing for men, blankets, quilts, coverlets, clothing for children, bolt goods, remnants and sewing materials.

Items not needed are such things as hats (except woolen hats or caps, neckwear, handbags, pillows and high-heeled shoes. All usable items will be sorted and packed by the women of Sacred Heart Parish and will be on their way to the needy overseas by Thanksgiving.

Since 1945, the year the first clothing collection was held under the auspices of Catholic Relief Services-NCWC, the people of the United States have been responding generously. Last year, for instance, the Thanksgiving-time appeal amassed a new peak national total of almost 20 million pounds.

The requests from overseas continue to plead for bolt goods, remnants, sheeting, diapers, infants' layettes and, in an increasing way from the tropical countries of Africa and South America, for shirts and shorts of the kind the American boy or girl would wear at a summer camp. This has become the standard dress for school children in the tropics. In attempting to meet these needs, the fund tries to supply sewing machines and needles and thread so that the western-type of clothing which is worn here in America can be adapted more closely to the needs and customs of the areas to which it is sent. In 1966, more than 500 sewing machines were sent.

Once again this year, the people of South Viet Nam, will receive the lion's share of the clothing, etc., given to this appeal. Catholic Relief Services-NCWC continues to conduct the largest voluntary assistance program in Viet Nam, and with the help of the military, has been able to move supplies to the neediest areas of Viet Nam More than 45,000 tons of food, clothing and supplies were distributed by CRS-NCWC in South Viet Nam this year. The medicines alone weighed 160 tons.

The Bishops' Fund agency shops more supplies to more countries to assist more people than any other agency in the history of American voluntary foreign aid. And it assists all the needy overseas without respect to race or religion. Real reed is the only criterion used by the agency in distributing the supplies furnished by the generosity of all Americans.

Tigers Wrap Up Football Season With 26-20 Loss

Smith-Cotton Ends Season With 4-6 Mark

The Smith-Cotton Tigers wrapped up their current football season Saturday night with a non-conference loss to Springfield Parkview, 26-20, at Springfield. The Tigers concluded their efforts with a 4-6 record.

Neither team was able to score in the first quarter. Springfield managed to draw first blood in the second quarter with 3:42 left.

Tony Wells, Parkview left half, intercepted a pass by the Tigers' Larry Thomas, on his own 29 and went 71 yards for the first score. Wells also attempted to kick the extra point, but his effort failed.

Not to be outdone, the Tigers bounced back and with 49 seconds left, Thomas passed to Jim Vinson who dashed 14 yards for the TD. Lee Deal's kick was side.

The half ended with the score tied 6-6.

Opening the second half, Parkview scored on the Tigers' kickoff. Springfield took the ball on their own 40 and, after four first downs, a pass from Jim Nabors to John Wetzel added six more points. The Nabors to Wetzel combination also scored the extra point.

Sedalia took the ball on their own 31 and moved it to the 14 where Vinson fumbled and Springfield recovered. Parkview worked the ball back down to the one-yard stripe on four first downs and then Wells went across for the score. The extra point attempt was missed. The Springfield drive had reached their own 38 when the third quarter ended. Their score came in the fourth period.

The Tigers took over and moved the ball to Springfield's two-yard line on five first downs. Then Vinson went over from the two for the score. Lee Deal's kick was good.

On the kickoff to Parkview, the kick was onside and Ron Rees recovered it on Sedalia's 49. Springfield held the Tigers to downs and Vinson was forced to punt. Springfield then took over on their own 26.

The Springfield drive got nowhere and they were forced to punt. With 39 seconds left, Vinson took the ball on his own 30 and ran 70 yards for the touchdown. Lee Deal's kick was good.

Not to be outdone and with 17 seconds left, Springfield took over on the kickoff on their own 44 and on the next play Richard Wolfe took a pitchout and ran 56 yards for the score. Mike Miller kicked the PAT. That ended the scoring.

Win Wraps Up Season For Cape Girardeau

KIRKSVILLE, Mo. (AP) — The Cape Girardeau Indians rolled up 21 points in the second quarter and went on to a 41-19 MIAA football victory over the Kirksville Bulldogs Saturday in the final game for both teams.

Halfback Walt Smallwood led the Indians' assault with touchdown runs of 16 and 28 yards. Also, the fine passing of Greg Brune to wingback John Diepenbrock and end Chuck Koerner proved too much for the Kirksville defense.

Kirksville's Sharron Washington scored twice, taking a kickoff back 93 yards and blasting off-tackle 82 yards.

Cape finished with a 4-1 Conference, while Kirksville was shut out for the first time in 27 years at 0-8.

Sports Scraps

By D. Kelly Scruton

IT seems that the title of the Jefferson City Jays, who finished a winning streak of 71 straight wins without a tie — the longest of any bonafide high school in wins — has been challenged. At least it was in Boy's Life Magazine of October, 1966, in which the writer of an article, "The Boys from Massillon" had indicated it wasn't the longest. The writer is Dick Kaplan.

It seems a lot of boys in this area read the article and have asked this writer if it was true. David Clay Jones, Smith-Cotton High School student, dropped me a line and then let me read the magazine which tells the story of Massillon, Ohio, Washington High School, which has always had great high school football teams, but not a record as long as the Jays.

It brings forth a remark that "Massillon never ducks strong opponents." It also referred to the fact the coaches there "x x x also heard about another high school that claims to have the finest team in America: Jefferson City High of Missouri."

Up until the time the article was published the Jays' record stood at 67 straight wins and Kaplan had this to say at the conclusion of his article, "Jefferson City's credentials are impressive. The Missourians have not been beaten since 1958, and carry a 67-game winning streak into the 1966 season. This is the second longest run of consecutive victories by a high school football team. The record belongs to Bedford County Training School of Shelbyville, Tenn., which won 78 straight games between 1942-1946.

"Massillon would love to play Jefferson City, would absolutely love to. 'Dad gum' says Earle Bruce (Massillon coach), 'can you imagine breaking a record like that? Their kids must be good, but not as good as we are, I'll bet.'

"Are you listening, Jefferson City?"

Now I kinda got to uphold the Jays record. They are neighbors and in our Central Missouri Conference. I still defend the record of 71 which incidentally, was snapped by a strong CMC team the Columbia Kewpies.

But take the figures the writer gave: 78 games from 1942 and 1946. Counting in 1942 and 1946, that's five years. Divide five years into 78 and you get 15.6 games in a season — which to me is unheard of for a bonafide high school, in the first place. I doubt if the Tennessee High School Activities Association, if they have one, would permit that many games anyway.

However, on good information, I was informed the past week by another sports writer, who said he had been checking and found out the Bedford County Training School had some tie games in their string — if it was that long — never beaten but tied. The Jefferson City Jays had 71 straight games of victories, no ties included.

So to us around here the Jays still hold the record unless someone comes up with a bonafide record on the school itself, maybe we'll let Bedford claim second honors in the record books.

—o—

IN spite of what some people may think or say I can assure you readers that the Sedalia Booster Club is now on a good solid foundation from reports that have come out of recent meetings. Although the school year does not roll around until next May and 1967 school season doesn't begin until next September, the men behind the project already are making plans for early meetings prior to the opening of school and will be prepared to meet football season headon for the Smith-Cotton Tigers.

With the football season over, they are not forgetting the Eighth Grade, Freshmen and Sophomore football players who spent many hours in practice and playing their own contests this past season. This afternoon something in the order of a picnic feed will be held for these boys and a good program is scheduled.

The affair gets underway at 3 p. m. with food and drinks and plenty of it, to be followed by a program under the direction of Coach Dick Rees assisted by his coaching staff. It includes a motion picture of some highlights of the University of Missouri football team.

But plans are now going forward in "pushing" the Tiger basketball team in hopes of inspiring more fans to attend the games and giving more encouragement to get boys out for this indoor sport. That's not all, already on the planning board is a program of enthusiasm for track and baseball.

For sure the more than 100 members of the Club which is growing meeting by meeting are going to find themselves all wrapped up in working committees to keep this organization alive and going.

What little the club was able to do for the past football Varsity squad of the Tigers, I have heard the appreciation expressed by many of the boys who hope it will continue.

—o—

I'VE had some inquiries about the Johnson twins, Jim and John, who boosted Smith - Cotton's athletics efforts a couple of years back.

The ESP must have been working, because their dad, Dale Johnson, dropped me a note this past week, telling me all about the boys.

John is a sophomore at Colorado State on a football scholarship. He was fifth string quarterback, but has now worked up to reserve quarterback and handles all the punting. He is currently second in the Rocky Mountain Conference in average, having a 42.8. However the sad news is he had a kick blocked last Saturday and one pass went over his head from the center so his average has been chopped. He has had punts of 81, 79, and 70 yards and several long kicks.

The Colorado team runs from the "I" formation, which is new to John, but he has gradually worked himself up. Incidentally his dad boasted John now stands 6-foot-1 and weighs 190. He has feelers from a pro football team about punting.

Jim is at the University of Missouri on a baseball scholarship. Last year as a freshman, he had arm trouble, but this fall he was better in practice and seems to be doing okay. His team is looking forward to this spring's schedule which takes them to Texas for a week.

I hope this is the dope all of you inquirers wanted.

Ricky Hunter

Tim Geohegan

Pacific Coast Champion

Ricky Hunter In Action; Will Meet Tim Geohegan

Popular Ricky Hunter, a former Pacific Coast wrestling champion, will be back in action here Wednesday night when he meets the challenge of Tim Geohegan in the Convention Hall ring.

Hunter, a 228-pounder, quickly made his mark in the Midlands when he won his first three starts in short order. In one, against burly Bob Brown, Hunter took only seven minutes to nail the 240-pound Canadian with the flying head scissors.

The 28-year-old grappler, pointing to a high ranking in area competition, has announced his intention of campaigning for the Central States title. That will have to be delayed for at least another two weeks. Present titleholder Sonny Myers is wrestling in Japan and won't return until after the Thanksgiving holidays.

Meanwhile, the rugged Geohegan poses a solid test for the young newcomer. Geohegan has both power and speed and a great deal of ring savvy.

Hunter will find in Tim a tough, willing opponent who appears to be at his sharpest when the going gets roughest.

Geohegan is likely to have a special plan ready to follow against the highly - publicized Hunter.

Two midget girl wrestlers also will be on the Convention Hall program. Matched are colorful Diamond Lil and Darling Dagmar in a battle of 85-pounders.

Other heavyweight pairings will send Lee Henning against Brown, Jack Donovan against The Viking.

Younger Tigers To Be Honored By Boosters

The Sedalia Booster Club held a meeting Nov. 10 with Coach Dick Rees presenting a film of the football game between Higginsville and Smith-Cotton.

Plans for a get-together at the Pacific Room, Pacific Cafe, at 3 p. m. Sunday were finalized with the 8th, 9th and 10th grade football boys being the guests of honor. On the program will be an M. U. highlight film and the coaching staff of Smith-Cotton High School will be talking to the boys about future football activities.

Oklahoma Is Out Of Race

Tigers Manager To Stave Off A Drive

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Missouri geared its Model-T offense for two haymaker punches that knocked Oklahoma out of Big Eight football title competition Saturday, 10-7.

The Tigers put together 10 points in the third quarter for their first scores in 10 quarters and then staved off frantic comeback attempts by Oklahoma.

The loss put Oklahoma's Big Eight record at 3-2 and Missouri at 3-2-1 in the league.

Fullback Bob Powell plowed in from the four-yard stripe on Missouri's first possession in the second half to break a scoreless tie and kicking specialist Bill Bates kicked a 52-yard field goal to gain the winning margin.

Oklahoma then moved quickly for its only touchdown with quarterback Bob Warmack sweeping for the final 10 yards to score early in the fourth quarter.

Quarterack Gary Kombrink, relegated to alternate duty for the game, engineered the swift Missouri touchdown drive which featured a 49-yard run to the Oklahoma 25 by reserve fullback Mike Ewing.

Ewing broke for his long gainer over the left side on the Tigers' first play from scrimmage in the second half. It took five plays for Powell to crash in. Bates kicked the point.

The field goal came after a pass interception and was booted into a light wind to set a Missouri school record.

Oklahoma came storming back with Warmack running and passing for most of the yardage on a 68-yard drive. After Warmack went the final 10 yards, Mike Vachon kicked the point and it was 10-7.

The Sooners tried twice to drive late in the period, but missed their best chance when Eddie Hinton fumbled a punt at his own 46 with two minutes remaining. Roger Short recovered for Missouri and the next time Oklahoma got the ball, it was on its own three-yard stripe.

The Missouri pass defense, best in the Big Eight coming into the game, limited the Sooners to 76 yards in the air and stole three passes.

Oklahoma's rushing game netted only 116 yards.

Missouri missed on its only two pass attempts, but ground out 212 rushing yards. Both teams lost two fumbles.

The first half found the teams struggling in vain as Oklahoma had only 61 yards to Missouri's 79. Missouri had the ball at Oklahoma's fifteen early in the game, but fumbled it away at the one-yard stripe.

Missouri halfback Charlie Brown was the game's leading rusher, netting 93 yards on 22 carries. Warmack led Oklahoma with 67 yards on 17 totes.

Warmack passed 4 times and hit 7 for all the Sooners' aerial yards.

Missouri	0	0	10	0—10
Oklahoma	0	0	0	7—7

Mo — Powell 4 run (Bates kick)

Mo — FG Bates 52

Okla. — Warmack 10 run (Vachon kick)

Notre Dame In 64-0 Rout Over Duke

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Nick Eddy's 77-yard touchdown scamper on the game's second play ignited a 43-point first-half explosion which carried top-ranked Notre Dame to a 64-0 football rout of error-stricken Duke Saturday.

In storming to their eighth victory, the Fighting Irish impressively tuned up for their big showdown with second ranked Michigan State next Saturday with a sharp display of passing, speed and alertness.

Notre Dame scored three touchdowns in each of the first two quarters as Duke quickly unraveled after Eddy's 77-yard scoring sprint touched off the massacre.

Coach Ara Parseghian opened the second half with Irish reserves against the 25-point underdog Blue Devils, who suffered their fifth defeat against four victories.

By the time the first half smoke cleared, Notre Dame had produced two touchdowns on Terry Hanratty's passing, another on a tricky 55-yard interception-lateral play, and two on short plunges.

Most important to the Irish was the return to form of star split-end Jim Seymour, who missed two previous games because of a wrenched ankle and who figures to be a big threat against Michigan State

Seymour grabbed three Hanratty tosses for 37 yards, including a 10-yard scoring flip which gave Notre Dame its 43-0 halftime lead. It was Seymour's sixth touchdown grab of the season.

Springfield In Championship Slot Of MIAA

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP)— The Springfield Bears won the MIAA football championship and a berth in the Mineral Water Bowl by outlasting the Warrensburg Mules 10-0 in their last league game Saturday.

The Bears grabbed a fumble on the Warrensburg five in the first three minutes and on the next play Jay Cummings drove for the touchdown. Pat Hogan kicked the extra point.

The action was even-up after that until Springfield's Rudy Rinker kicked a field goal from the 15-yard line with 4:23 left.

The Mules penetrated to Springfield's 20 a couple times in the third period, but their attack always broke down.

The play of Richard Haynes, Warrensburg linebacker, was outstanding. He made 18 unassisted tackles and helped on five others.

Springfield is 5-0 in the conference and 7-2 over-all, and will finish its schedule next week against Southern Illinois at Springfield. The Bears then will play in the Mineral Water Bowl at Excelsior Springs the afternoon of Nov. 26 against an opponent not yet chosen.

Warrensburg's record is 2-3 and 4-5.

FIRST DAY — Karl Kasak, Smithton, bagged this eight-point buck within the first hour of the opening of deer season Saturday. Using a 35 caliber rifle, Kasak brought the 143-pound buck down six miles south of Gravois on his uncle's farm.

Mississippi Holds Onto Its Jinx Over Tennessee, 14-7

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mississippi maintained its jinx over Tennessee Saturday, beating the 10th ranked Vols 14-7 on quarterback Bruce Newell's passing and a 51-yard touchdown run by end Jerry Richardson with a fumble.

The victory was Mississippi's eighth in a row over Tennessee and it made the Rebels a prime prospect for a major postseason bowl game. Ole Miss went home with a 6-2 record, and left Tennessee with a 5-3 mark.

Newell hit wingback Bill Matthews with a 22-yard pass for a touchdown with 24 seconds left in the half. Jimmy Keys kicked the first of two extra points.

Mississippi's second and game deciding touchdown came with 1:49 remaining.

Tennessee's Dewey Warren, pack to pass, was tackled by Bobo Uzzle. The ball squirted upward, Richardson caught it on the run and outsprinted several Tennessee defenders for the score.

5,975 Deer Are Killed On First Day Of Season

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) —Missouri deer hunters killed 5,975 deer on the first day of the 1966 firearms season Saturday.

That compared with a total kill last year of 18,785 and a first-day total of 3,976.

It was believed to be the largest single day kill since deer hunting became legal in the state.

Ozark County led the list with 297; Texas was second with 285 and Howell third, with 274.

The state conservation commission had no count on the number of hunters but said the hunting pressure was extremely heavy on a bright early fall day.

The season runs through Nov. 18.

Bow and arrow hunters had killed 360 deer through Nov. 8, compared with 244 at the same time last year.

On the first day of the firearms season, David Vincent, 11, Kirksville, shot an albino fawn near Workington in Putnam County. An 83-year-old man from Mound City, Everett Mann, shot the second deer of his life on his own 160-acre farm.

The first day count broke down to 3,818 bucks and 2,157 does.

On the first day several hunters were wounded, one in Camden County and one in Carter County.

Spartans In Victory Over Hoosiers

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP)— Jimmy Raye brought Michigan State to life with his passes in the second quarter and the Spartans overwhelmed Indiana 37-19 Saturday to wrap up the Big Ten football championship.

The victory gave Michigan State its second straight crown and perfect conference season.

The Spartans played dead for the first 10 minutes of the game and then managed to grind out a 7-0 first quarter lead on the ground.

Raye went to the air and completed six passes without a miss in the second period, five of them in two sequences that paid off with touchdown tosses of eight yards to Dwight Lee and 29 yards to Al Brenner.

For the game, Raye completed seven of nine passes for 171 yards and three touchdowns.

Frank Stavroff of Indiana broke the Big Ten passing record with 316 yards on 23 of 36 passes. Two went for touchdowns. Jerry Snook of Iowa set the old record at 310 yards.

The Hoosiers' aerial game lost some of its punch when end Bill Couch was injured on a reception in the third quarter. Couch's left knee was hurt and he was taken to a hospital. He had caught five passes for 66 yards.

Clint Jones spearheaded the Spartans' powerful running game, gaining 97 yards in 20 carries. Sophomore Regis Cavender got their ground touchdowns on two runs of 14 and 8 yards.

Barefooted Dick Kenney of Michigan State kicked a 27-yard field goal on the last play of the first half and missed a 57-yard attempt in the third period, the ball hitting the left goal post. One of his four extra point kicks was a 33-yarder, the ball having been set back by a penalty.

The rugged Michigan State defense held Indiana to minus 10 yards by rushing.

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — Northwest Missouri State of Maryville rolled over the University of Missouri at Rolla in Rolla Saturday, 36-13, behind the running of halfback Joe Spinello and quarterback Don Orlowski.

Spinello, with 8:13 left in the first quarter, bulled over from the four-yard line.

After Rolla scored on a one-yard run by Bob Nicodemus, Orlowski slammed up the middle for 28 yards and a touchdown on the last play of the first quarter. On the play before, Spinello moved the ball into Rolla territory on a 24-yard scamper.

ATLANTA (AP) — Larry Good kayoed punchless Penn State with a pair of early touchdowns and guided fifth-ranked Georgia Tech to a 21-0 victory Saturday, keeping the Yellow Jackets in position to pick off one of the top bowl berths.

The sophomore quarterback tossed a 20-yard scoring pass and ran four yards for another touchdown in the first quarter of the intersectional football battle watched by officials from the Orange and Gator Bowls.

Halfback Lenny Snow, shackled most of the game by the Penn State line led by tackle Dave Rowe, nailed down the ninth straight victory for Tech in the fourth quarter with a one-yard scoring leap.

Nebraska Wins Fourth Straight Loop Title

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Undefeated and fourth-ranked Nebraska won its fourth straight Big Eight football title Saturday, subduing stubborn Oklahoma State 21-6 after a first half standoff.

Leading only 7-6 at the half, Nebraska used a fumble recovery in the third quarter to pad its margin. Langston Coleman fell on the ball bobbled by Jack Reynolds on OSU's 22. A Bob Churchich pass to Tom Penney ate up 11 yards and Churchich scored on four-yard keeper with four minutes going in the half.

A 45-yard touchdown drive in the fourth quarter put the game out of reach, Churchich scoring on a one-yard plunge.

Successor Pulls Win

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Successor, off to a slow start, fairly flew through Garden State Park's sloppy home stretch Saturday and won the $314,125 Garden State Stakes, practically wrapping up the 2-year-old title of 1966.

The son of Bold Ruler caught the pace setting Bold Hour inside the one-eighth pole and scored going away by three lengths.

Bold Hour was second, six lengths in front of Proviso.

In chalking up the 40th stakes triumph of the year and earning $188,475, Successor paid $6.60, $3.80 and $2.80.

Bold Hour returned $4.80. Proviso paid $4.40 to show.

Key Passes And Catches Bring Iowa State Win

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Key passes by quarterback Tim Van Galder and catches by end Eppie Barney carried Iowa State to a 30-13 Big Eight victory over Kansas State Saturday.

Barney broke the Big Eight career record for pass receptions as he furnished the favorite target for Van Galder in key plays for four Iowa State scoring drives.

The 6-1, 203 pound senior from Cleveland, Ohio, caught five passes to lift his career total to 81 before leaving the game late in the fourth quarter with a knee injury.

This broke the Big Eight career record of 79 held by another Iowa Stater, Jim Doran.

Kansas State held a slight edge in offensive yardage on the running of Cornelius Davis and the passing of Bill Nossek and Vic Castillo.

But the Wildcats were held in check by their own inconsistency and four Iowa State pass interceptions.

McCall Leads Colorado To Beat Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Talented Colorado, led by its No. 2 quarterback Bernie McCall, jumped to a quick 14-0 lead, then traded touchdowns with Kansas for a 35-18 victory Saturday in a wild offensive game that moved Colorado into second place in Big Eight football.

Colorado finished its Big Eight schedule with a 5-2 record and stands 6-3 for the year. The Buffs took over the runner-up spot with Missouri's 10-7 upset over Oklahoma.

McCall was spelled by starter Dan Kelly for key plays during his team's 72-yard 18-play touchdown drive from the opening kickoff, but handled the club the rest of the way, and his excellent passing was a major factor.

Spirited Kansas pulled up 21-10 with an 86-yard drive in the third period, mostly on the passing of the No. 2 quarterback Bob Douglass, a tall sophomore.

Third-Ranked 'Bama Hammers Out Victory Over South Carolina

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Third-ranked Alabama got its sputtering offense rolling long enough Saturday to hammer out a 24-0 victory over South Carolina.

The Crimson Tide, gunning for a third straight national championship, throttled the injury-riddled Gamecocks' attack but was unable to take advantage of several scoring opportunities.

It was Alabama's 13th straight victory and marked the eighth loss in nine outings for the Atlantic Coast Conference Gamecocks.

Georgia Is Assured Of Conference Tie

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — The Georgia Bulldogs, led by Kirby Moore and Brad Johnson, spotted Auburn two touchdowns Saturday and then fought back for a 21-13 victory and at least a tie for the Southeastern Conference football championship.

A record frowd of 47,000 shirt-sleeved fans packed into Cliff Hare Stadium saw Auburn's Tigers run up a quick 13- point lead the first two times they got the ball. Until the start of the second half, Georgia could get nowhere against an inspired Tiger pack, fumbling twice deep in Auburn territory.

But the Bulldogs, ranked ninth in the nation, began methodically chewing up big holes in the Auburn line from the start of the third quarter and never let up.

Sedalia Soccer Team To Play Rockhurst

The Sedalia junior soccer team goes against the Rockhurst High School club Sunday at 12:45 p.m. at Swope Park, Kansas City. The Sedalia team is looking for their third victory. In an earlier meeting here this season, they shut out Rockhurst 2-0.

Lt. Kent Maxfield, manager of the Sedalia club, has shifted from the conventional system to the 4-2-4 system. Maxfield, who played goalie for the Naval Academy under the 4-2-4 system, said, "The only way Sedalia can expect to win any game in the junior amateur soccer open cup play is to teach our boys to play the 4-2-4 system with four forwards, two halfbacks and four defensive fullbacks. We have three strong halfbacks in Monty Finley, Jim Parker and Howard Estill."

Shawnee Mission East will play the Sedalia junior at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at Centennial Park.

Acquired A Record Before 17 Years Old

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Michael J. Herrington, held in Milwaukee in the knife slayings of two girls, began acquiring a police record here before he was 17 years old.

He was placed under the jurisdiction of the Jackson County Juvenile Court for unstated reasons and remained so until he was 17 years old.

A month after his 17th birthday, he admitted having molested a 10-year-old girl after striking her on the head with a blackjack. He was again turned over to juvenile officers, but the police record shows no disposition of the case.

When he was 18 he was given an indeterminate sentence under the federal youth corrections act after pleading guilty to three counts of tampering with the mails. The charges were filed in connection with the theft of letters from an insurance company.

Evidence in the case showed he had taken more than 300 letters in a five month period and had taken money from them.

Sheppard Trial Moves Along Sat.

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The murder retrial of Samuel H. Sheppard, with its mixture of old and new testimony, continued Saturday to move along swiftly compared to the 65-day first trial 12 years ago.

Saturday's half - day session winds up the third week of the trial. In those three weeks the prosecution has completed presentation of its case against the 42-year-old former osteopath and much of the defense case has been presented.

One new witness called by the defense in the retrial was Sheppard's son, Samuel (Chip) Jr., whose appearance was a dramatic highlight in Friday's testimony. Chip, who was only 7 when his mother, Marilyn, was beaten to death July 4, 1954 in a bedroom adjoining his own room, told the jury he remembered little of the events of that morning.

Sheppard was convicted of second-degree murder in the first trial and spent nine years in prison before an appeal through the federal courts brought an order, upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, for a new trial.

Also called Friday by chief defense attorney F. Lee Bailey was an older brother of Sheppard, Dr. Stephen Sheppard, and Dorothy Sheppard, the wife of the defendant's other brother, Dr. Richard Sheppard.

Mrs. Sheppard testified that when she and her husband went to the Samuel Sheppard house to check the furnace Nov. 11, 1954, she found a key under a kitchen wastebasket. The police officer accompanying them found that the key fit the back door, she said. Mrs. Sheppard did not testify at the first trial.

Dr. Stephen said an X Ray taken the morning of the slaying after Sheppard was admitted to Bay View Hospital showed a "chip fracture of the second cervical vertebra" about one and one-half inches below the base of the skull.

Under questioning by the prosecution, Stephen said X Rays taken July 6 did not confirm the break.

The 46-year-old osteopath said police raised no objection as he took his brother from the house to the hospital, three miles away, where the three Sheppard brothers and their father were staff members.

The doctor, who was a witness in the first trial said that 10 days after the slaying, J. Spencer Houk — then mayor of Bay Village and one of the first persons at the house the morning of the slaying — asked them to persuade the defendant to plead guilty to manslaughter.

Houk, who lived three houses from the Sheppards, had denied this in earlier testimony as a state witness.

In letters to all Democratic representatives, he said he thought he could work well with any speaker elected by the House.

That race has narrowed down to a fight between Rep. Thomas D. Graham, D-Jefferson City, seeking an unprecedented fourth term, and Rep. James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, running with the support of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

Play Review To Be Given On Nov. 22

Altrusa, one of Sedalia's prominent women's business clubs, will sponsor a benefit dramatic play review presented by Dorothy Hopkins, Sedalia's professional play reviewer, at the Smith-Cotton High School Auditorium, Tuesday, Nov. 22. Mrs. Hopkins will present "Sound of Music", starting at 8 p. m.

The performance will be given for the benefit of the Childfen's Therapy Center and the Sheltered Work Shop, which are the two agencies Altrusa selected this year as their projects.

The Altrusa event will be known as "A Night At The Theater", featuring Mrs. Hopkins, who is well known throughout Missouri and Kansas for her delightful play reviews.

Mrs. Hopkins does the unusual in play reviews in that she condenses Broadway hits and reenacts the prinipal roles and sings the outstanding musical numbers of the show in sequence to unfold the entire story. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Betty Jolly.

The graphic characterizations in "Sound of Music," as presented by Mrs. Hopkins, reflects her diversity in presenting this true story about the Von Trapp family who fled to this country from persecution by the Nazis in Europe. "Sound of Music" has had both long runs on Broadway and on the road, as well as being made into one of the most widely accepted movies of all time. Maria Augusta Von Trapp originally wrote a story about her family known widely as the Trapp Family Singers.

Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse later wrote the book for the play, while Richard Rodgers composed the music and the late Oscar Hammerstein II developed the lyrics.

Mrs. Hopkins received special dramatic training at the University of Missouri. She later appeared in leading roles in a number of Community Playhouses and Little Theater groups throughout the country. Here, she was coached and trained by a number of outstanding stage directors, one of whom is Ralph Schnetsky, now considered one of Hollywood's most outstanding TV directors.

Tickets for the benefit performance are on sale at the Chamber of Commerce, Missouri Public Service, Priddy's, Lorene's Card and Book Shop, The S & H Green Stamp Center and through members of Altrusa. Mrs. Dorothy Riley is president of Altrusa.

A Thanksgiving supper was planned for Nov. 19 at the Bothwell School. Plans were also made concerning a Christmas party to be held Dec. 14 at the home of Mrs. Vernon Horn, with a contributive dinner to be served.

Mrs. Harry Runge read a poem "Friendship Garden." The afternoon was spent in making Christmas articles.

Defendant Reproves Arresting Officer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A woman defendant in municipal-county traffic court Friday told the judge the arresting officer was "'rude" to her.

"How?" asked the judge.

"He told me to keep my mouth shut," she asserted.

"'"Your honor," explained the officer, "I just told the lady that she could remain silent and she didn't have to say anything without talking to her lawyer first."

Man Charged In Milwaukee Stabbing

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — "Everybody can sleep a little easier," said Police Chief Harold Breier after police charged a factory worker in a series of stabbings that had terrorized residential areas in Milwaukee.

Michael J. Herrington, 23, accompanied to Milwaukee County Court by his pregnant wife, was charged Friday night with slaying a 10-year- old girl Sept. 4, an 18-year-old waitress Oct. 17 and with attempted murder of an 11-year-old girl Friday morning.

Breier said Herrington, identified as a parolee from Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary, had admitted two slayings for which he was charged with first-degree murder, and the latest assault whose victim was reported in satisfactory condition.

Herrington accompanied police to the sites if the attacks on the city's near West Side.

The series of assaults had resulted in demands for increased police protection, a campaign to have porch lights burning all night, and a request by the city that youngsters make Halloween trick-or-treat rounds before dark.

Herrington had been questioned in the beating and stabbing of Julia Beckwith, 10, whose body was found Sept. 4 in a vacant lot near her home after she had gone on an errand for a sister.

The body of waitress Sherryl Thompson was found Oct. 17. She had been stabbed 22 times, Breier said Herrington had admitted both slayings.

Breier said Herrington admitted attacking Kathleen Dreyer, 11, as she walked to school Friday. The child, stabbed in the back, told police her assailant fled when she screamed.

Herrington was seized after witnesses, including school children, provided police with a description of a man seen in the alley where the Dreyer girl was attacked.

Polic said the Dreyer girl's assailant reportedly leaped from a car, clapped a hand over the child's mouth and forced her into the alley behind garage and dwellings.

Herrington was named in warrants signed by County Judge Christ T. Seraphim who set bonds totaling $65,000.

Journalists Refuse Women Fraternizers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Delegates to the annual convention of Sigma Delta Chi professional journalistic society defeated today proposals to admit women as members and change the organization's name.

The name change failed 125-19, while the other proposal was defeated 94-46 in a roll call vote.

The delegates elected Robert M. White II, co-editor and publisher of the Mexico, Mo., Ledger, as president and board chairman. He succeeds Raymond L. Spangler of Redwood City, Calif.

Aslo elected at the concluding session were Tom Storke, editor-emeritus of the Santa Barbara, Calif., News Press as honorary president; Stanley T. McBrayer, of the Fort Worth, Tex., News Citizen newspapers, first vice president; Warren K. Agee of The William Allen White School of Journalism, vice president for campus affairs; William B. Arthur of Look magazine, secretary, and Frank Angelo, Detroit Free Press, treasurer.

Hored as society fellows were James L. Kilgallen of United Press International; Ralph E. McGill, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, and Charles A. Sprague, former governor of Oregon and publisher of the Salem Statesman.

Reports of Using Gas May Change Soviets

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Word that the Communists have used nonlethal gas in Viet Nam may scuttle Soviet bloc efforts in the United Nations to condemn the United States for chemical warfare.

The Reds made no mention of a report the Viet Cong had lobbed tear-gas type grenades at U. S. troops when they brought up the issue of bacteriological warfare Friday in the General Assembly's main political committee.

Hungary's Ambassador Karoly Csatorday, who introduced the resolution, charged that U.S. use of gases and chemicals in Viet Nam was "on the fringe of genocide."

William C. Foster, chief U. S. disarmament negotiator, said Red allegations that the United States was using any kind of poison gas in Viet Nam were "absolutely without foundation."

Foster did not mention the reported Viet Cong gas attack either, but he emphasized that he would deal with the Communist charges in detail later in the debate.

This roused speculation that the United States would give a full airing to the reported Communist switch to gas warfare.

A U. S. spokesman said American troops had also found about n,200 gas grenades among enemy arms and ammunition spotted in abandoned tunnels Thursday. He said they were not of U. S. manufacture.

The gas in the grenades was described as nonpoisonous, but the disclosure could ruin the propaganda effect of the Soviet bloc resolution.

Csatorday claimed that nonlethal gases can also take lives by increasing the incidence of disease.

Alaskan Governor Still Hoping

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Gov. William A. Egan, saying the "picture has taken a dramatic turn," Friday night ordered the state patrol to guard all ballots from Tuesday's general election in Alaska.

"There is more than a hope that the present administration will remain in Juneau," said Egan, who last Wednesday conceded defeat to his Republican opponent, Walter J. Hickel, millionaire Anchorage hotelman.

Egan, Democratic chief executive since Alaska gained statehood in 1959, called for the police guard as unofficial returns from remote districts continued to close the gap between the two men.

With 383 of Alaska's 398 precincts reported, Hickel led Egan 30,996 to 29,771 today.

Egan said he understood there are about 3,750 absentee ballots that will be counted Wednesday at the state's four district election offices in Nome, Fairbanks, Anchorage and Juneau. The official state canvass of other ballots starts the same day.

The governor said the police guard would be maintained until the official ballot count is completed. He said he has invited Republicans to provide watchers at district election offices when the ballots are counted by official canvassing board members.

Hickel, long active in Republican party affairs, made his first bid for office this year. He was out of the state today and could not be reached immediately for comment.

Heroic Priest Educated Near Here

CONCEPTION, Mo. (AP) — Chaplain Michael J. Quealy, a Roman Catholic priest killed while administering last rites to wounded men in Viet Nam Thursday, received part of his education at Conception Seminary here.

The New Yorker came to the seminary in 1954 and two years later was ordained a priest. He was then assigned to a pastorate in the Birmingham, Ala., area.

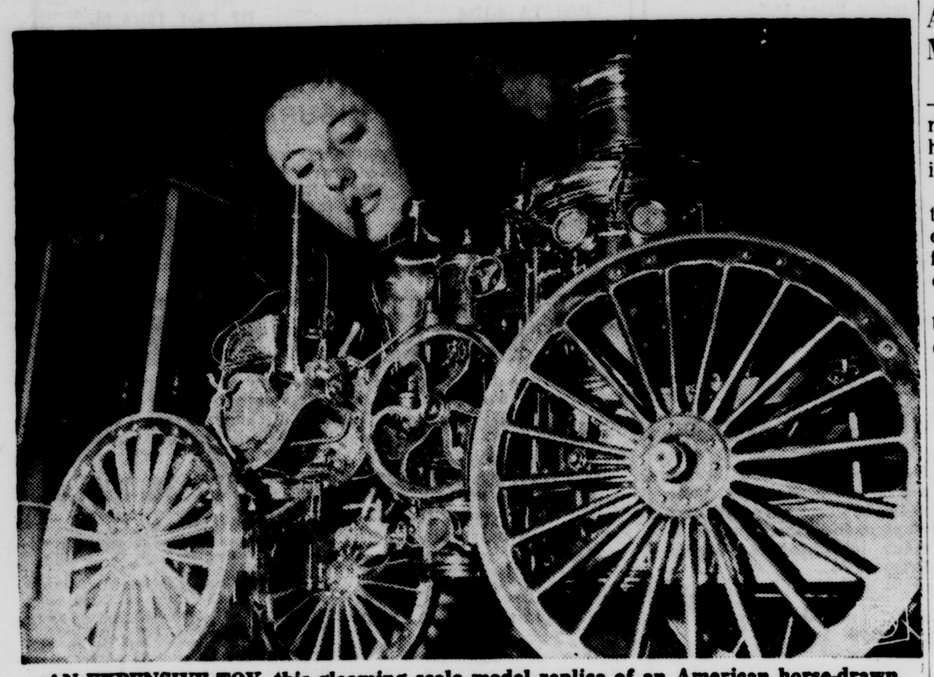
NEW YORK—The lady's hair is still cropped short, but hair "falls" to shoulder length or longer are the trend for Spring, 1967. Designer Oscar de la Renta, at the firm of Jane Derby, showed these two coiffures with his evening clothes. At left is the long braided hairpiece; at right, the twisted plait adorned with a ribbon. (UPI)



AN EXPENSIVE TOY, this gleaming scale model replica of an American horse-drawn fire engine of 1870 brought $8,232 when sold recently in London. The old fire fighter was one of a number of rare replicas which went for record prices.

People In The News

NEW YORK (AP) — Joseph Frantz, who claims he shot down the first German warplane of World War I, was among a group of about 60 French war veterans who marched along New York's Fifth Avenue Friday in the city's annual Veterans Day American Legion parade.

Frantz, now 76 and the owner of a small steel plant near Paris, leaned jauntily on a cane and recalled:

"It was on Oct. 5, 1914, when I was flying a Voisin fighter over France. I got into a dogfight with a German Aviatik and shot it down. When I landed, a general said he would award me a medal for heroism."

"I explained to the general that I already had that particular medal. 'Good,' he told me, 'I'll give you the Legion of Honor.'" Frantz added with a chuckle.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bob Corps has a new member — President Johnson.

But he isn't President Johnson, the chief executive.

He is a youngster from Hammond, La., with the first name President and the last name Johnson.

NEW YORK (AP) — Edward Albee, the author, has been named to write a completely new book for "Holly Golightly," a musical that has been having its troubles on its tryout tour.

Albee takes over from Abe Burrows, writer of several hit musicals who has a reputation for repairing other people's shows. Burrows will continue as director of the show, which is based on Truman Capote's novel, "Breakfast at Tiffany's."

Otterville Garden Club Holds Meeting

The Otterville Garden Club met Oct. 21 with Mrs. Robert Painter, Pilot Grove, with fifteen members present.

Mrs. Lewis Leaton, president, opened the meeting with "Thought for the Day," and led the group in repeating the Lord's Prayer.

Mrs. Leo Smith reported on progress made on year books for 1967, and discussed plans for activities during the year. Mrs. Leaton reported on the district meeting held in Raytown, the club having received a blue ribbon on achievement, and a green ribbon on the yearbook. Mrs. J. H. Parsons gave the program on "Care of the Roses for Winter."

Artistic Design was "Wealth of Beauty," with awards as follows: Mrs. William C. Dunham, blue ribbon; Mrs. Lewis Leaton, red ribbon; and Mrs. O. W. Howard, white ribbon. In "Late Bloom" displays, the following ribbons were awarded: Mrs. R. A. Kirchner, two blue and one red; Mrs. J. P. Dunham, two blue and one red; Mrs. Lewis Leeton, two blue and one white; Mrs. O. W. Howard three red; and Mrs. William C. Dunham, one blue, one red and one white.

Initiated Into Kappa Mu Epsilon

Six Central Missouri State College students were initiated into the Beta Chapter of Kappa Mu Epsilon national honorary organization in mathematics in October.

Those from this area were: Robert C. Adams, Clinton; John M Brown, La Monte; Carolyn Sue Alderman, Cole Camp; and Jesse E. Martin, California.

Top freshman mathematics student for the academic year of 1965-66, Jesse Martin, was honored, with honorable mention awards going to Janice Wright, Sedalia.

To meet minimum membership requirements, a student must be regularly enrolled at CMSC, must have completed at least eight hours of college mathematics, five of which must have been earned at CMSC, and must include one course in analytics and calculus and presently be enrolled in a regular course to complete ten hours. The student's scholarship must be above 2.75 in mathematics and 2.5 in general scholarship. No grade in mathematics may be below "C".

Moose Lodge Holds Smorgasboard

Moose Lodge, 1492, held a smorgasbord, Nov. 10, at the Moose Lodge.

The meal was prepared by the wives of the Moose members and the Women of the Moose.

Those in charge of the smorgasbord were: Paul Burke, chairman; Jennie Brown, in charge of the food; and Cecil Curtis and Bill Erfling, in charge of ticket sales.

American Spacemen Mothering Frog Eggs

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — America's men in space are mothering frog eggs to find out how a tadpole learns which end is up.

Twice Friday the experiment, testing the effect of gravity on embryology, called for attention from astronauts James A. Lovell Jr. and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr.

On their first pass over the United States, they were ordered to put a thermal cover on the egg box because instruments on the ground said the eggs were too hot.

Later, mission control asked the astronauts to "jiggle the electrical connector to the box," and the spacemen checked this out.

The fertilized eggs came from female leopard frogs which ovulated on a frog farm here in tune with the Gemini countdown.

If all goes well, the Gemini crew will bring back to earth tadpoles hatched in space to help Ames Research Center, Moffett Field, Calif., investigate what bearing gravity has in the earliest learning of animals.

Beatles To Do What They Really Want

LONDON (AP) — "I suppose we've got to go on being the four mop-tops," Beatle John Lennon told the Daily Mirror today.

"We've no intention of splitting up. We will go on recording songs."

Lennon was trying to dispel persistent rumors that the famous quartet is on the point of disbanding.

The singer, guitarist and lyric writer conceded that the rumors stemmed from the fact that all four Beattes have independent interests.

Paul McCartney has been working recently on the score for a new British movie.

THE SEDALIA DEMOCRAT

Sedalia, Missouri, Sunday Morning, November 13, 1966 | In Combination With The Sedalia Capital | Feature Section

IN THE JET AGE — These birds, once past the eviscerating line, are cleaned again, this time by jets of cool water which smash into the birds, inside and out, to remove whatever undesirable particles might be left. Once through this small chamber, the birds are almost ready for their ice bath.

READY FOR MARKET—Here they are, Mrs. Sedalia, ready for that Thanksgiving feast. This is the way the birds look after they go through the complete dressing operation. Here, just out of the deepfreeze for packaging, this freezing rack, holding 60 birds, awaits the final step.

No Beauty But Plenty Of Quality Evident On Turkey Dressing Line

By PETER F. DANIELS

The most succulent turkeys might never have a chance in a beauty contest — even in their prime. Ther's nothing beautiful about a turkey—strutting, sitting or bawling. Yet after a mere 24 weeks of life, sometimes even less, the bird becomes "tasty" "succulent," "tender," or even "a feast fit for a king."

From farm to table — a one way trip for most turkeys in this area — is well-planned and efficient business. At one local plant, the MFA Poultry and Egg Division, about 7,500 turkeys can be converted from the prime of life to an icy lump in a day's time. A mere 24 hours later the birds can be ready for shipment to market.

The peak season in the turkey business runs from June to mid-December. In that time, a plant like MFA's here, can dress 900,000 to a million turkeys, depending on some ever-present variables.

Following a single turkey, from the time it comes off the truck to the time it is stuffed into ice and water, takes about 20 minutes. There are no wasted motions in the slaughter of turkeys. And, surprisingly enough, the turkeys don't suffer much either — other than a swift, clean death.

Here's a typical, step-by-step process in dressing turkeys — assembly-line style:

After arriving at the plant, the turkeys are removed from cages by hand and "hung" on shackles which carry them, upside-down, from the unloading platform to the plant proper. There, an electric charge stuns the bird before it is slaughtered by hand.

So far, no process has been found which will kill the birds efficiently and neatly. The death cut is a fine, tricky and important art. A false cut can cause all sorts of problems. If the cut is too close to the jawbone, for example, the bird will become rigid and create a packaging problem.

The line carrying the birds doesn't stop. It's 500-foot length moves steadily throuh the slaughter area into a sort of steam bath, shaped like a long, rectangular tunnel, which prepares the birds for the automatic defeathering process further down the line.

Once the feathers are off, people begin to handle the birds, cleaning them, checking them, separating the usable parts from the unsuitable. There is, once again, little or no waste in motion.

After being cleaned, the birds go into an ice bath for about 24 hours. This is only 20 minutes after the birds came off the truck, remember. The ice bath, some experts in the business say, helps tenderize the birds. Locally, the process is still used by MFA, even though other, faster methods are used or being studied.

After their "bath" the birds are sealed in plastic and frozen, then packaged. According to Alfred Sorrell, manager at MFA, four hens are put in one box, while only two toms go into a similar box. In all cases, however, the processing of toms and hens is kept separate.

Following the packing operation, the birds go into a deep freeze to awit shipment. Or they can be shipped out the same day. In every plant, trained, representatives of the U. S. Department of Agriculture are present, on the line, inspecting birds for quality. Those that do not meet government standards are rejected and taken off the line — long before packaging.

As in any business, turkey processors are forced to contend with many variable situations. Only a few are: fluctuating market values, the number of birds per shipment, weather, processing schedules, and so on. The weather element might cause raised eyebrows, but it must be remembered that trucks cannot transport birds through mud, ice or snow. Sometimes a whole schedule will be thrown off by some unforseeable problem.

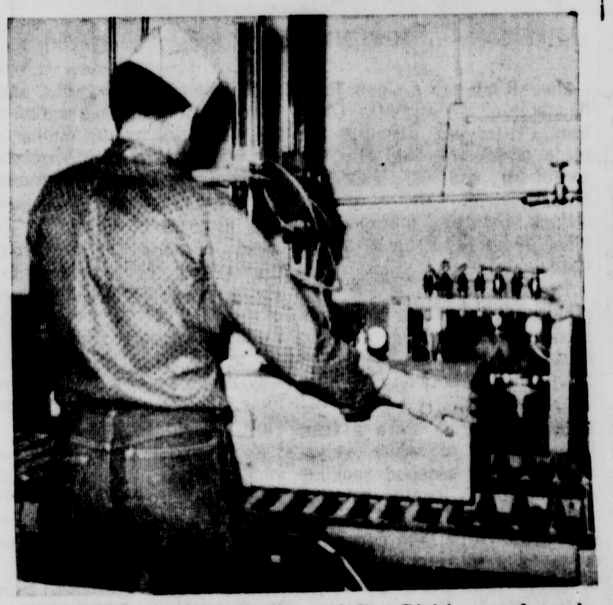
MFA employs about 150 people here and has the facilities to dress over 7,500 birds a day. The plant can store as many as 150,000 birds in deep freeze daily.

Consumers, for various reasons, seem to prefer hens over toms, Sorrell said. Part of this may be due to the fact that hens "fit more pocketbooks," and are somewhat easier to handle. That affects prices, both for the turkey growers and the processors. Both toms and hens, however, are in great demand now. The price difference, from the processor's viewpoint, favors hens by about a cent to a cent and a half per pound, over toms. There is no difference in processing methods for toms and hens.

On the average, about eight birds are placed into a cage on those long, squawky turkey trucks coming into the city. An average hen load can run as high as 2,000 birds per truck, while toms run over, 1,000 per unit, depending on the size of the truck, of course. Sedalia processors find most of their turkey suppliers in the central Missouri area, two - thirds of them in the immediate vicinity of Sedalia.

For a turkey, it's only a short trip from being a cobbler to becoming a feast. With the built-in safeguards checking each other as well as the processors, the modern housewife need never fear that the turkey she buys is anything but the best in quality. The birds are ready, and only her final preparations can make that Thanksgiving meal a real success.

HAND CLEANING GOES ON—The line moves continuously as these birds are cleaned manually in a process technically called the "eviscerating line." The work is technical and demands high skill. Government inspectors check the birds to make sure they meet government requirements before being packaged.



LAST STEP—An MFA Poultry and Egg Division employee is shown here sealing a carton in which the turkeys are placed prior to leaving the local processing plant. Each box contains either two toms, or four hens, depending on which is being packaged at the time. It's only a matter of seconds before the box, guided along a track, is firmly sealed.

"KILL LINE"—Looking even more ungainly than usual, these turkeys are moving off the unloading dock on a device called a "kill line" which is, basically, an over-head cable arrangement carrying the birds to slaughter and later to the dressing department. About 20 minutes after being put on the line, the birds will be put into ice and water prior to packaging and freezing. (Democrat-Capital photo)

TRUSSING — Here, employees at the local MFA Poultry and Egg Division plant are shown as they "bind" the birds for packaging in a "trussing" process. The idea here is to pull the birds' legs in as close as possible to make a neat, compact package for the consumers who will later buy the birds. The trussed birds go from here in a 24-hour ice bath, after which they are bagged and frozen.

ABOUT THE FOURTH STEP—Here, almost immediately after being defeathered, the wing tips, or "fan feathers" are removed from the birds in a hand-finishing process. Birds are prepared for defeathering by a steam-bath affair and then pulled on through an automatic process of removing all feathers.

Movie Stars Appreciated Vietnam Trip

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Roy Rogers remembers the nine Viet Cong captured 200 yards away as he and wife Dale Evans sang and joked on a flatbed truck.

Robert Mitchum asked the first GI he saw, "What brings you to sunny Southeast Asia?" and was told: "Duty, sir. All people are worth fighting for."

For Hugh O'Brian the most moving experience was "wounded guys in hospitals—thanking ME!"

Around an oval table at Screen Actors Guild headquarters the other afternoon, these and other stars reported to the Hollywood Overseas Committee on their Viet Nam visits.

Pentagon brass expressed appreciation. "To me the greatest thing you bring them is the realization that somebody appreciates they're there," said Adj. Gen. Kenneth G. Wickham.

A USO official said field commanders have asked for even more visits—"A tremendous tribute to what you're doing."

Said Chairman George Chandler, pipe-smoking, veteran character actor who used to be Grandpa on television's "Lassie": "We'll do what we can."

Jennifer Jones was in Viet Nam even then. Upcoming were tours for Frances Langford, Bob Hope (his third to Viet Nam 14th overseas at Christmas), Jack Palance, Minnie Pearl, Tammy Grimes, Jackie Mason, Eddie Fisher, Buddy Hackett and others.

So-called visitation tours are for stars who, as Charlton Heston said in describing his own trip, "can't sing or dance, you aren't pretty and Hope tells better jokes."

Said Chandler: "Just shooting the breeze does as much as anything. Raymond Burr has been over six times."

O'Brian, shot at twice in a helicopter, visited four- and five-man U.S. outposts. "The first thing they'd say was, 'What the hell are you doing here?'" he told a reporter. "We'd talk about baseball, Playboy magazine, anything."

Rogers, his wife and five musicians were just back from 17 days in Viet Nam. All but three or four shows were in the rain. One was at a suburban Saigon ammunition dump that, days later, they heard blow up.

"Most of the kids had grown up with us," said the film cowboy. "One told me, 'I've still got my Roy Rogers cap pistol. I'm saving it for my kid.'"

The lurking Viet Cong captured in midshow had three rifles. "We don't know whether they liked Western music or not," Roy cracked.

Slim, pink-haired singer Jimmy Boyd, 27—whose 1951 hit record "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus" is reissued every Christmas and has sold nine million copies—toured with three musicians and two girl singer-dancers.

All of the stars volunteered to return. Several said the soldiers' morale had done much for their own. Said O'Brian: "It made me very proud of my country."

Police Chief Gets Lasting Impression

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, Ohio (AP) — They may be perfect fingerprints, but Police Chief Rodman Scott would be happier without them.

A man being booked to serve 40 days for disorderly conduct and contempt of court unexpectedly remarked, "If the chief wants my fingerprints, he can have them."

With that, he neatly pressed his inked fingers onto Scott's new white hat, lying on a nearby counter.

Simon, Bergenstock Vows Exchanged In Autumn

Bouquets of white gladioli and chrysanthemums flanked the altar of the Sacred Heart Church at eleven o'clock, Saturday morning, October 1, for the marriage of Miss Mary Sue Simon to A2-c Philip Bergenstock. The Rev. William Miller performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Simon, Route 1. Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bergenstock, Moravia, N.Y., are the parents of the bridegroom.

The Mass was served by Mr. Michael Simon, brother of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an elegant floor length sheath gown of silk peau de soie. The bodice was fashioned with a rounded simi-scooped neckline and the traditional long sleeves tapered to points over the wrists. The divided overskirt, with unpressed pleats at the waist, drifted gracefully into a chapel length train. Lavish embroidery of braid, seed pearls and crystal beads enhanced the bodice and the front panel of the skirt. An open crown pillbox with a scallop of seeded pearls held her veil of silk illusion. A cascade of carnations fell from her silk and lace covered prayer book.

Miss Patricia Simon, Kansas City, served as maid of honor, and Miss Jo Ann Simon, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. They wore floor length matching gowns of blue velvet. The graceful A-line gowns fell from Empire waistlines accented by a band of blue satin with a bow adorning the front. Velvet roses held their short brush veils and they carried colonial bouquets of blue and white carnations.

CALLING ALL HOMEMAKERS

by Raymond Fieth

THE AGE OF "ACCESSORIES"

There is an old song, "You're the cream in my coffee". What cream is to coffee, accessories are to decorating. And although decorative accessories are as old as furniutre itself, there never was a time when they were so widely used, or of such importance to the furnishing industry, as they are now.

This does not mean that accessories should be used indiscriminately or that a room should be cluttered with them. They should be used sparingly and appropriately: but the right accessories are like the right frame on a picture.

And talking of pictures, with the great revival of art in America, there are more pictures bought and used than ever before. Large pictures, small groups of pictures, both originals and good copies, add color and life to any room.

But accessories take many and varied forms. Among the many items which are so popular, and so effective, are scones, plaques, wall clocks, planters, lavabos, figurines, sculptures, floral arrangements, decorative ash trays, artificial fruit, tapestries, mirrors, cut glass, consoles and wall brackets. These are in every type from antique to contemporary and can be the perfect finishing touch to make a room more elegant.

Please come in to see our lovely collection of accessories.

Landlords Wanted

Former Embassy Buildings Vacant In West Berlin

EDITOR'S NOTE—"So sad," says the consul. He means the 365-room Italian Embassy in Berlin, built by Hitler but never transferred to Italy. Now there are weeds on the roof and pigeons in the dining room. Likewise the Chinese Embassy stands gaunt and empty, waiting for Germany to recognize one China.

BY MARTIN ZUCKER

BERLIN (AP)—Wanted: landlords for two former embassy buildings in West Berlin.

One, the Italian, has no legal owner. The other, the Chinese, has a legal landlord that doesn't exist anymore.

The Italian situation is this:

The Nazi government decided in the late 1930s that it wanted three pieces of diplomatic property owned by the Italians. These were the embassy building, a general consulate and the Casa Del Fascio, a house for fascist get-togethers. In exchange, the Hitler government was to build the Italians a consolidated diplomatic building.

The deal was agreed to and in 1941 the new building was completed. A Berlin newspaper commenting at the time called it a neo classic ostentation."

It was big — U-shaped, three stories high with 365 rooms. There was an apartment for the Italian king — who never used it - an apartment for the ambassador, plenty of office rooms and even a chapel in the basement.

At an official ceremony, German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop handed the structure over to Ambassador Dino Alfieri. The two parties exchanged contracts for the properties and said they would get around to signing them after the war was over.

The way things turned out, the only signing both fascist governments were qualified to do was on documents of surrender.

The exchange remained uncompleted and became a problem to the postwar governments. Both Italy and West Germany claimed ownership of the property.

"There has been a struggle in Bonn for over 15 years and I still don't know how it will end," Italian Consul General Felice Benuzzi said recently.

"We have put a half million marks — $125,000 — into the building to repair war damage, but we are not expending a pfennig more until it is legally given to the Italian government," he added.

The building took a couple of bomb hits during the war and later Russian and German soldiers slugged it out among the Travertine columns in the courtyard.

After the war one wing was restored for use by the consulate general. The other wing was walled up from the outside while inside, debris and ruin remained Wild plants grow from rooftop wreckage and a battalion of pigeons make camp in the king's dining room. A great reception room looks like a shattered railroad station.

"So massive, impressive and yet so sad," lamented the consul.

Sad, too, is the former Chinese Embassy building, located on west Berlin's bustling Kurfuerstendamm Boulevard. Except for the caretaker's family, it is empty.

The building is five stories and sits introverted and gray among its aggressive, neon-glowing neighbors.

A faded yellow sun on a blue shield — the emblem of the Republic of China — is mounted above the main door. A flagpole protrudes frigidly from the third floor. A few windows are covered with card board.

A Formosan stationed in West Berlin said the building can be occupied only when West Germany recognizes a Chinese government, which it has not yet done. He said this condition was established by Britain, which has a say in the matter because the building is in the British sector of Berlin.

The building was erected in 1896 and nine years later bought by the Ching dynasty — then rulers of the Chinese empire. Through World War II when it was lightly damaged and until 1945, the building served as the Chinese Embassy.

After the Nazi collapse it became the seat of the Chinese military mission.

After the Communist revolution succeeded in China in 1949, the mission moved to other quarters in West Berlin. The building was abandoned to the caretaker and administered from Formosa's embassy in Brussels.

The caretaker is a middle-aged German woman who was born in the building. Her father, once a butler for Kaiser Wilhelm, was caretaker before her.

"People ring my bell maybe 50 times a year and ask if the property is for sale," she said. "They want to build theaters, restaurants, apartments, bars, markets and everything imaginable.

"I tell them I dont know what will happen to the building but that they can't buy it either. Some come back hoping that things have changed. But I just tell them no again."

Kennedy's Fading Camelot

By SID MOODY
Associated Press Writer

Jacqueline Kennedy once, in a moment of sentiment, looked back on it all and called it Camelot.

Camelot: a fabled place where the sun always shines and there is only time to be young. A misty dream, but, as with dreams, perishable.

More than a thousand days have passed since the thousand days of the presidency of John F. Kennedy. Over 4,000 times the tide has flooded and ebbed across the sands at Hyannis Port, carrying the prints of that time with it.

And yet...

Last summer several Secret Service men who had guarded John Kennedy returned to Cape Cod to visit the family, to see how the children they once protected had grown and because, as one said, "There has never been anything like it."

Surely there must have been. And will be again. And yet...

And yet the memory persists and not only with those who were there. The public still comes. To Hyannis Port. To Middleburg. To Washington. To Palm Beach. To see where it all was: where, suspended, indefinable, some of it still is.

Southern Boulevard, the road from the airport into Palm Beach, crosses a drawbridge over the Intercoastal Waterway. On a recent sun-soaked morning, the perennial fisherman on the causeway scarcely looked up as the bridge opened for one of the season's first southbound yachts that migrate as predictably as the birds. The yachts owners wouldn't be arriving until Christmas or later.

Palm beach was serene and almost deserted. An occasional pastel golf cart trundled among the palms of the Everglades Club.

Sprinklers sowed lazy spirals of spray across the green estate lawns. Slow-motion gardeners made neat piles of the defoliation left by a tropical storm.

At 601 North County Rd., a yard man raked the driveway. This had once been the winter White House, loaned by a family friend.

A power line crew worked on the road. Routine repairs.

The lines that once made this Spanish villa the command post of American power, the communications trailer that had been parked a mile up the road at Joseph Kennedy's home where the President had spent the last weekend of his life, were long gone.

Palm Beach dozed in the sun.

"People here like things to stay the way they have been," said B. (for Bartlett) Arnold, the city manager. And that's how things have stayed.

Off Season Palm Beach is a still life. On this day a cream-colored Rolls-Royce got out of control, mounted a sidewalk and gave a stately bump to the O'Connor Building on Royal Palm Way.

People came out, looked, and went back inside having witnessed the biggest story of the day.

Architectural gossip is a fact of (the good) life, as expected in a town where many of the villas look like they were designed by the ancient Moors, had the ancient Moors lived long enough to behold Hollywood, and where architect Addison Mizener used to age wood paneling by simulating worm holes with birdshot, fired point blank.

Currently there is the four-bedroom home being built by Mrs. Robert Young, the widow of the New York Central mogul, for $2 million.

It is going to have two bowling alleys under the swimming pool and electrically operated hurricane windows. The storm windows in the servants' quarters are hand cranked.

Such are the monuments of Palm Beach. The only one in town to John F. Kennedy is a plaque in St. Edward's Catholic church across from Bob Green's drug store, where any one from King Farouk to Roger Blough could, and may well have, bought toothpaste.

Someone also suggested naming Southern Boulevard after the President, but the idea lapsed.

OLD AND NEW in farming are shown together on the Roy Humphrey farm near Grand Pass, Mo. In the foreground is a machine labeled "Dain's Safety Corn Cutter, Ottumwa, Iowa," which has two blades that fold out. The mule walks between two rows of corn and operators catch the cornstalks as the blades cut them off. The stalks are then stacked into corn shocks. The modern combine in the background has a six-row corn head and picks and shells corn in a single operation.

The family didn't want any changes, said B. Arnold.

"Besides," said Bob Green, "with renaming Cape Canaveral and Idlewild and all, we thought it a little much."

This is not because in a town that swarms in winter with captains of industry and kings of nations, presidents are com - monplace. It is because the Bob Greens and B. Arnolds knew Jack Kennedy from boyhood, knew him well.

Their loss is observed by private mourning, not public monument. When they recall him, they pay the kindest tribute of the living to the dead: They smile at his memory.

They remember the President in his own convertible trying to race past his escort on Southern Boulevard "like an overgrown kid"; swiping a Secret Service car to drive downtown to buy some of the rainbow-hued slacks he favored; driving down towards Fort Lauderdale on Sunday to see how Prince Radziwill, his brother-in-law, was doing on one of those 50-mile hikes he inspired; jumping from the Honey Fritz to go whisking across Lake Worth on a catamaran with its astonished crew.

"I was in Ireland the same time the President made his tour there," said Msgr. Jeremiah O'Mahoney, pastor of St. Edward's. "He introduced me to the crowd as 'a priest from a poor little parish back in Palm Beach, Florida'."

Others in town have their memories. And Palm Beach itself, a lush troika of society that was, society that is and society that would like to be, has, perhaps without intending to, kept alive a remembrance simply by going on as it always has.

Far to the north, in Middleburg, Va.; Autumn had come to the Blue Ridge. White fences curved up hill and down in an immobile frieze towards the manors of the gentry, fringed with harvest hues of copper and flame red. In the village, homebound school boys kicked fall acorns along the old streets. Bitter leafsmoke spiced the air.

"This is a place that worships the horse, not people," said Eugene O'Connor, a real estate man whose sign outside advertised choice $250,000 "farms" for sale.

It was cubbing season for the fox hunters, a time to shake the kinks out of horse and rider and break in new hounds. Mrs. Kennedy had long ago shipped her horses to fox hunting country in New Jersey, where she has taken a house.

No, said O'Connor, he didn't think she had been back since it happened.

In Middleburg, as in Palm Beach, things haven't changed much, are quieter if anything.

Out front of the 228-year-old Red Fox Tavern, where the press corps once thronged, a solitary old Negro swept leaves off the brick sidewalk. One hundred ladies were coming for lunch.

Oh, there had been a few changes. One of the President's Secret Service agents had married a local girl. A warrant officer who handled the hot lines had decided to make the village his home.

There are six antique stores where there had been two. A grocery store clerk who used to rent rooms to the Secret Service had gone into the tourist business and added a swimming pool. A Chinese-born financier, Quing N. Wong, had bought the Kennedy home.

Middleburg has time for its past, Washington, but an hour's drive away, does not. It is a city of now and of tomorrow. It cannot linger on what has been, for it must cope with what is coming.

One symbol of this, the White House, is haunted with the ghosts of tenants past, but none can claim it for his own.

One can remember John Kennedy's office with its rocker and ship models and marine paintings and the old desk carved from the timbers of the Resolute and the engraved whale's tooth and the coconut shell the young lieutenant cut his help message on in World War II.

And in time it will be remembered that President Johnson liked a clean desk, installed news tickers in a not quite soundproof cabinet, giving the office a city room atmosphere, installed a three-screen television set, changed the paintings to Western and early American scenes and kept a rocker exactly like Kennedy's.

One can note that chili is now a menu staple; that Rene Verdon, the Kennedy's French chef, has been replaced by Swiss-born Henry Haller — the press is reminded the name is pronounced Henry, not Awhn-ree; that the swings and tree house and pony are gone from the White House grounds but dogs are not and neither is Ike's putting green; that culture is stressed at Johnson dinners as much if not more than under the Kennedys; that the White House is a darker place because Lyndon Johnson really means it about the light bill.

One can note all this, yet it proves nothing other than that the presidents — all of them — belong to the old mansion, not it to them.

Even in Arlington Cemetery the roar of air hammers and earth movers at work on the Kennedy tomb defeat remembrance. Crowds intrude.

And if it is John F. Kennedy's resting place, so is it, in nearby graves, that of Admiral Byrd and Medgar Evers and James Forrestal and Oliver Wendell Holmes and President William H. Taft and Robert Todd Lincoln.

No, if Camelot there were and Camelot there be, it is farther to the north. The artifacts are in Hyannis Port.

The public seems to sense this. Even in fall, cars from all over the union cruise slowly by the picket fence of the President's home on Irving Avenue. Excursion boats make daily trips by the family compound.

Shops in Hyannis sell Kennedy plaques and ash trays.

Last summer, the President's mother announced she would attend a book fair and autograph any and all of the many Kennedy books. In three hours, every Kennedy book in town, from paperbacks to expensive photo albums, was sold out.

The town bears tangible marks of the family's tragedies.

The skating rink is named for Joseph Kennedy Jr., the President's brother, killed during World War II.

This summer the town erected a $66,000 memorial to the President.

The President's old sailboat, the Victura, still races on Nantucket Sound. Only now the President's brother, Teddy, is at the helm.

Jacqueline Kennedy comes back regularly, as she does not to Washington, Middleburg or Palm Beach.

Caroline has braces now and rode in summer horse shows and John Jr. swam in races at the Beach Club.

For the first time the President's widow has felt relatively free to move about — to plays, antique shops, stores.

Occasionally a helicopter putters over the rambling homes of Hyannis Port.

"They revive old memories," said Larry Newman, who lives across Irving Avenue from the President's home. "We miss the excitement."

But Bobby Kennedy is there, drawing crowds at St. Francis Xavier church almost as large as his brother did. And Hyannis Port, built by adults seemingly for the benefit of children, saw all 24 Kennedy grandchildren romping about the family compound where Ambassador Kennedy, still badly crippled from his stroke, spends most of his time.

A policeman stands duty outside his home but his wife, Rose, occasionally chats with tourists over the fence.

"There was the usual number of broken bones among the children this summer," said Newman. "The Shrivers had a pet monkey and an owl and one of the children was bitten by a white rat.

"A district attorney from Boston suffered a shoulder separation playing touch football and Teddy invited a touring detach-

President Has Weekend On Ranch

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson promised to have a quiet weekend at his Texas ranch after a flurry of conferences with key advisers on topics ranging from the new budget and his State of the Union message to reports on possible peace moves.

His latest visitor Friday was roving Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, back from an 11-nation tour with hopes "something may come" of forthcoming British-Soviet talks on Viet Nam.

Harriman termed a scheduled Nov. 21-23 meeting of British Foreign Secretary George Brown and Soviet leaders "the most promising" of initiatives many nations are undertaking in an effort to launch peace moves.

The British and Russians are co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva Conference that partitioned Viet Nam.

Harriman said: "The meeting of these two governments is a very important event. We are hopeful that something may come of it. It is impossible to predict, but at least the Soviet Union has considerable influence in Hanoi."

Johnson joined Harriman in another of a series of front lawn news conferences at his ranch. It was his sixth meeting with reporters since he came here last Friday to rest before surgery to remove a throat polyp and repair an incision hernia. A date for the surgery has not been announced.

The wife of former President Harry S. Truman telephoned the Johnsons Friday night to inquire about the President's health.

Both Johnson and Mrs. Johnson spoke to Mrs. Truman, who called from the Truman home in Independence, Mo., and after assuring Mrs. Truman the President was feeling fine, sent their best wishes to the former president.

Johnson told newsmen that since he has been at his ranch he has talked or met with every one of his Cabinet members and received reports from task forces preparing for his State of the Union message to the new 90th Congress.

After hearing from Harriman and jovially greeting reporters, the President advised: "We will have a quiet weekend and I will see you at church Sunday."

Johnson, asked about Pope Paul VI's latest plea for a Christmas truce, replied: "We are very anxious to always give consideration, and as sympathetic as possible to any suggestion the Pope gives, as we did last year. But we are also very anxious to have other people do likewise."

Approve Merging

CHICAGO (AP) — The merger of two churches into the largest Protestant sect in the United States, the United Methodist Church, with 11,081,000 members, has been approved by delegates of the two curches.

In separate meetings in the same hotel Friday, delegates to the general conferences of the Methodist Church and the Evangelical United Brethren Church voted overwhelming approval of the merger.

The Methodist Church, with 10,331,000 members, is now second in size to the Southern Baptist Convention with 10,393,000 members. Merger with the 750,000-member EUB would make the new church the nation's largest.

The merger, which must be ratified by regional conferences of the two churches, carried 749-40 among Methodist delegates. EUB delegates approved by a 325-88 vote.

Funeral Held Friday For Private Reynolds

KANSAS CITY (AP)—"Let us thank God that he chose to die that we might be free..."

Army Chaplain Harry L. Millard delivered the funeral sermon Friday for 20-year-old Pvt. Ernest D. Reynolds of Kansas City who was one of five killed Nov. 2 in an ambush by North Koreans.

Reynolds has been recommended for the posthumous silver star award for bravery.

The only survivor of the ambush, Pfc. David E. Bibee, said Reynolds was "the one really brave guy in the crowd. He could have run away. Nobody would have known where he went. But he stayed."

Army officer said the tracks indicated Reynolds, trying to help his comrades, ran toward the Communists and fired until he was killed. A trail of blood indicated he hit some of the attackers.

Capt. Millard, of Ft. Leavenworth, said:

"None of us set out to be heroes. And yet when the time comes, there are a few of us who have the courage to stand and fight and die for a cause in which we believe."

US Debtors Still Drain Gold Supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of the nations which received gifts and loans from the United States in two world wars and the postwar period now are helping themselves to this country's gold supply.

In fact, the 26 nations which drained gold from the U.S. Treasury during fiscal 1966 also owed the United States money. And in the case of their World War I debts, they had made no payments in almost 35 years.

France had drawn more gold from the Treasury since 1962 than any other nation. During the fiscal year which ended June 30 — the latest figures available — she drained more gold than all other nations combined.

Since most nations are indebted to this country it's the exception rather than the rule for nondebtors to drain gold from the U.S. Treasury.

Only four debtor nations — the United Kingdom, Greece, Colombia and Morocco — added to Uncle Sam's gold supply during the year, the British by about $170 million.

The Treasury Department also listed three nondebtor nations which sold gold to the United States during the fiscal year — Canada, Switzerland and the Vatican.

Countries normally sell gold to this country to obtain the dollars they need to carry on foreign business.

This can be done simply for the asking. The United States guarantees conversion into gold at $35 an ounce of the dollar holdings of foreign central banks.

France converted $577.7 million into gold during the last fiscal year and has converted at least $223.7 million since June 30.

Her policy of buying at least $34 million in U.S. gold monthly came to a halt during October, however, because of her falling reserves. U.S. officials saw this as only temporary but expressed hope that the worst of the French gold drain may be over.

The French, although still in debt to this country, are ahead in their payments on their World War II and postwar era debt. The latest payment, in September, left a balance of less than $400 million of the epproximately $2.5 billion borrowed.

But France still owes $6.7 billion, including interest, on her World War I debt and no payments have been made on that since 1932. In 1953, this country agreed that no further World War I payments need be made until German reparations were settled, an unlikely vent unless and until Germany is reunified.

The total drain on U.S. gold duing the same fiscal year was $519.7 million, including $378.4 net sales to foreign countries. The government also sells gold for domestic industrial and artistic use.

CAPE KENNEDY—"End" reads the sign on Ed Aldrin's back as he marches up the ramp of his waiting Gemini-12 spacecraft and the final flight of the Gemini series. Aldrin and James Lovell blasted into orbit Friday in a chase after an Agena target vehicle, then scored a successful rendezvous and docking. (UPI)

Two-Car Collision Takes Life of One

FESTUS, Mo. (AP) — Leroy Murphy, 56, of Arcadia, Mo., was killed and his wife and two others injured Friday when Murphy's car collided with another on U.S. 67 near Festus.

The other car was driven by Phillip Potter, 18, of Fagus, Mo. Potter and his brother, William, 19, were taken to Jefferson County Memorial Hospital in Festus.

Patrolmen said Murphy and his wife, Bernice, 53, were taken to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis.

Prefer Draft To Lottery Poll Tells

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans oppose substitution of a lottery for the present draft system, a polling organization told a national conference on the draft today.

"The vast majority of Americans favor drafting young men for military service," Louis Harris & Associates said in a report presented at a luncheon session.

The memorandum to Gus Tyler, director of special projects for the American Veterans Committee which is sponsoring the conference, added:

"This support is expressed almost equally by those who have relatives in the armed forces, those who say they have a family member eligible to be drafted, and those who are not personally involved in the Viet Nam war."

Representatives of educational, professional, youth women's, labor, business, veteran, church, farm and other national organizations are attending the conference, which ends today. It was called to provide a national forum for discussion of the prsent draft system and of possible alternatives.

Speakers Friday noted that Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara had been quoted this week as saying a lottery might correct some deficiencies in the present system.

The Harris memorandum reported that a poll in March 1965 found that 64 per cent of those queried said they favored the draft. Later that year the unity mounted to 90 per cent but by August this year the support had slipped to 79 per cent, it said.

"Clearly, though, the (Selective Service) system is thought to work," the memorandum continued.

"There is little support for a form of lottery under which all would have an equal chance for being drafted. By almost three to one, 73 per cent to 27 per cent, the public rejects substituting the lottery idea for the current system."

"The draft is accepted because its need is recognized," the memorandum said.

"If there is to be a change in the present draft law, the public is clear about the direction. By nearly 4 to 1, people favor the idea of a universal service program for all young men between 18 and 26, under which they could choose between a two-year stint in the armed forces, the Peace Corps, or in some other public service."

NEW YORK (AP) — Margaret Smollen is only 9 years old, but for the past five weeks she has been acting as the mother for her four brothers and two sisters and running the household.

The Smollens' mother, Theresa Smollen, 30, disappeared Oct. 4. Since then, Margaret has been in charge of household chores in the family's $45-a-month, three-room tenement flat in the Bronx.

Her chores include cooking for the father, William, 48, who works for a brick masonry firm, and caring for the dog. Her brothers and sisters range in age from 10 months to 11 years.

Mrs. Smollen vanished after leaving the home for Fordham Hospital. The hospital told her husband it had no record of her having been there.

Smollen said the Welfare Department offered to take the children off his hands and put them in foster homes, but he refused.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lady Sarah Churchill Russell, 43, a cousin of the late Sir Winston Churchill, and Guillermo Burgos, 28, of the Burgos Art Galleries in New York, plan to marry within the next few days.

Lady Sarah obtained a marriage license Thursday, listing her occupation as "housewife" on the application. The daughter of the Duke of Marlborough and granddaughter of the late Consuelo Vanderbilt was divorced last October from Edwin F. Russell, publisher of the Harrisburg, (Pa.) Patriot-News.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The confusion won't be quite as bad in the 1967 Indiana General Assembly when the two Walter A. Barans return.

Walter A. Baran of East Chicago will be back in the Senate, where he served with Walter A. Baran of Hammond, a fellow Democrat, in 1963. This year the Hammond Baran was elected to the House.

Neither Baran served in the 1965 session. During the 1963 Senate session it was necessary for the reading clerk to add their home towns to their names on voice roll calls.

The Barans say they're not related.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF SEDALIA SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 200 — YEAR 1965-66

September 14, 1966

Board of Education
Sedalia School District No. 200
Sedalia, Missouri
Gentlemen:

We have examined the statement of Assets and Liabilities and related statement of Cash Receipts and Expenditures of the Sedalia School District No. 200, Sedalia, Missouri, for the year ended June 30, 1966. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and requirements set forth in Section 165.121 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, and included such tests of the accounting records as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

The daily attendance and transportation averages for the year ended June 30, 1966, were found to be substantially correct.

In our opinion the statement of Cash Receipts and Disbursements and Fund Equities present fairly the financial position of the Sedalia School District No. 200, Sedalia, Missouri, at June 30, 1966, and the results of its operations for the year ended, in conformity with accounting principles set forth in the Missouri Uniform Financial Accounting System and the Revised Statutes of Missouri applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding period.

Respectfully submitted,
TAYLOR-WAGNER COMPANY

Charles Is Almost Ready As Sovereign

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Starting Monday, Prince Charles is eligible to become king in his own right.

This is because Nov. 14 is his 18th birthday,

Under Britain's Regency Act of 1953, Prince Philip has been empowered to act for his son, as regent, if Charles succeeded to the throne before he became 18.

Of course, Queen Elizabeth II would have to die or abdicate before her son could become monarch. Should the queen temporarily become unable to fulfil her duties, however, her son becomes king in all but name. He would be called prince regent.

In any case, Charles replaces his father as potential prince regent, an English way of saying he will then be substitute king.

At 18, Charles becomes one of six counsellors of state and begins receiving a fixed yearly income of 30,000 pounds — $84,000.

"This doesn't mean that he's going out and start buying motor cars, or throwing his money about," said a source close to the throne. "He's always had a private income, and while he's always been given almost everything he's wanted, he's certainly been given everything he's needed. Getting 30,000 a year should make not difference in his way of life."

What is his way of life?

For one thing, there is no real girl friend.

"You must remember," said the royal source, "'English boys of just 18 don't usually have girl friends. They know girls, yes, and plenty of them, but they don't usually settle down to one.

"Charles goes out a lot socially, especially when he's in London, at Windsor Castle, or up at Balmoral — in Scotland — during the holidays.

"He and Princess Anne (Charles' 16-year-old sister) are great friends, and they often go out together to parties and dances, but if there's a girl friend I've never heard of it and I should have."

Charles is a senior at Gordonstoun, the spartan-like Scottish school with 380 students.

He is studying hard to pass his A-level examinations, necessary to enter university.

When Charles graduates next summer he will be more than 18½ — old for a British schoolboy.

One reason for his being behind most boys of his age is the two terms he spent at the Geelong School in Australia.

As a friend of the family put it: "He had a good time there, was extremely popular, spent a lot of time outdoors, but I don't think he did much studying."

Charles is a pretty good student, but hardly Phi Beta Kappa material. His strongest subjects are English literature, history, French and Latin.

He's also a good rugby football player — he broke his nose last month.

Sources that are to be trusted say that after a British university — not yet announced — Charles will probably attend McGill University in Montreal. It is possible he may attend an American university as a graduate student or to specialize.

Charles is growing up in several ways.

He's whacked off that semi-Beatle haircut — or lack of haircut — and he's taking a strong interest in clothes.

He's much neater than he has ever been, and becoming tall and slim like his father.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: My mother-in-law is driving me out of my mind. Now that we have a little girl she is always wanting pictures of the four generations. This means her mother, herself, my husband and our little girl. She says, "Loretta, step out, please. This is just OUR side of the family — four generations you know." Then she hands the camera to her husband and asks him to take the picture.

Ths has happened a half dozen times in the past eight months and I am sick of it. What's the answer? -- NOT INCLUDED

Dear Not: What's the question —how to put an end to it? You can't. So step out gracefully, Loretta, and stop eating yourself up over nothing. If a little thing like this can drive you out of your mind, dearie, I must say it's no drive — it's a short putt.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a teen-ager with a heavy heart. Yesterday a friend told me that my parents had to get married because I was on the way. She added, "It was awfully nice of your father to marry your mother. He could have gotten out of it." I was so shocked and hurt I didn't know what to say.

If my mother had told me about this herself I would have felt a lot better. Should I ask her why she kept it from me? Also should I tell my two younger brothers? I don't want them to hear about this family disgrace from a friend like I did.

My parents have been married for 15 years and they seem to get along fine. Please give me some advice. I am crushed.—BORN TOO SOON

Dear Born: Don't ask your mother any questions and don't give your brothers any information. Your "friend" has a very big mouth and her aunt's mouth is even bigger.

I do not feel that your mother should have told you about the circumstances of the marriage, so don't hold her silence against her. The important thing is that your parents get along well today. What happened 15 years ago is nobody's business.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently an acquaintance and I were having a bite of lunch at a counter. We were discussing a small town with a waitress who had visited here recently.

In the middle of the conversation, a pleasant looking, white haired man seated himself on the stool next to min. He said, "Pardon me, but did I hear you say Greenville? I've always had a hankering to live there." He asked some questions about the climate, the people, the cultural advantages and so on. I tried to answer him to the best of my ability.

Suddenly I felt a sharp dig in the side from my lady friend I glanced at her in surprise She gave me a dirty look and hissed, "Turn your back on that old fool and talk to ME."

The old gentleman must have heard her because he left with-

Akward and self-conscious? and told her so.

My friend insists the old man was rude to have horned into our conversation, and that I was rude for allowing him to do it. When I took her home she slammed the door in my face and yelled, "Why don't you write to Ann Landers about this?"

So I'm writing. — PUZZLED

Dear Puzzled: The old gentleman was obviously a friendly type — and probably lonely. I would not describe him as rude. But your lady friend WAS rude — and unfeeling and unpleasant and immature and ill-tempered.

Akward and self-conscious? Unsure of yourself? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key Tc Popularity," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Man On Way To Wedding Killed In 3-Car Smash

PECULIAR, Mo. (AP) — An 80-year-old man, on his way to a granddaughter's wedding in Arkansas, was killed Friday in a three-car crash on U.S. 71 just south of Peculiar.

The victim, John Isaac Rogers of Kansas City, Kan., had refused to take neighbors' advice to go by air.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Warczakoski said they were worried when Rogers told them Thursday night he would leave at 5 a.m. to drive to Little Rock.

"You could be down there in an hour by airplane," Mrs. Warczakoski told him.

"Oh, I think I can drive all right, and scenes along the way are so pretty at this time of year," replied Rogers, who had been employed regularly by a construction company, although he would have been 81 Jan. 8.

The highway patrol said Rogers passed another car at the top of a hill and collided head-on with a car driven by Gary Dale Smith, 24, of Harrisonville, Mo. A pickup truck driven by Roy Paul Fleischer, 30, of Butler, Mo., also hit Rogers' car.

Smith suffered cuts and bruises. Fleischer wasn't hurt.

ment of Green Berets down for the weekend — and more football. A typical summer."

Newman looked out his window at a tourist standing on his car hood to photograph the Kennedy home. "In Hyannis they'd put him in the psycho ward. Here it's standard procedure."

The tourist drove off in the direction of the Kennedy memorial, a large medallion of the familiar profile set in native stone and flanked by Cape Cod eve greens. So far the town has collected over $3,000 tossed into the memorial fountain and has scheduled a special meeting to decide what to do with it.

People come to the memorial at all hours. John McKeon, Hyannis mail supervisor, says he has passed on his way to work at 4 a.m. and seen people there. But that night it was deserted, except for a watchman.

It was cold in the chill sea wind that moaned softly through the pines. In the dim lights shining on the medallion it was just possible to read the inscription around the rim of the fountain, words John Kennedy once spoke:

"It looks as if we have a very live elephant," said Ray C. Bliss, and indeed it did.

Bliss, Republican national chairman, was radiant over the GOP's showing in Tuesday's off-year elections. The elephant, feared defunct under the Johnson landslide of 1964, was the picture of health after Tuesday.

Republicans picked up three seats in the U. S. Senate — now aligned 64-36; 47 seats in the House of Representatives — now 248-187; eight governorships, to bring their total to 25, and picked up 677 seats in state legislatures, giving them control of both houses in 15 states.

More important, perhaps, were the new faces emerging for the 1968 presidential sweepstakes. Gov. George W. Romney scored an impressive win in Michigan, Ronald Reagan a smashing victory in California, and Charles H. Percy a solid win in Illinois. All of them looked pretty good for '68, along with Richard M. Nixon, who had been coaching from the sidelines.

It was true that the Republicans captured neither house of Congress, but their gains quickly portended a change in national direction. Allied with Southern conservatives, they could change the image of President Johnson's "Great Society."

The President conceded this by saying the new Congress "will be more difficult for any new legislation we might propose." He was consoled, however, by the belief that the election results would bring no change in Viet Nam policy. Analysts pondering the Republican resurgence differed on the reasons but agreed that the two-party system was still much alive.

In Viet Nam, what had started as a routine American probe had, by week's end, turned into the largest operation of the war. The probe, into Zone C, some 65 miles northwest of Saigon, disclosed the presence of the North Vietnamese 9th Division, apparently poised for a winter offensive.

The American probe called for support and quickly got it. By Wednesday, 7,000 American troops had been thrown into Zone C in what was now dubbed Operation Attleboro. By Friday, 25,000 American troops were committed and the enemy deaths were said to total 900. Some U.S. units were mauled, but over-all American casualties were termed light as fighting continued.

As the Americans poured on the air raids and artillery, Maj. Gen. William E. DePuy, commander of the U. S. 1st Infantry Division, said, "We hope the enemy will stay and fight."

After two days' delay, America's last Gemini flight got into orbit on Friday. First an Agena rocket was placed into orbit. Ninety-nine minutes later a Titan rocket carried Gemini 12 into orbit bearing Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr., 38, and Air Force Maj. Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin Jr., 36, on a four-day ride. Then they linked up.

Before splashdown Tuesday in the Atlantic, they were to make three separate space walks and conduct other experiments looking toward the day when man goes to the moon. Next up on the space schedule — the first of the three-man Apollo shots in January.

Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's Christian Democrat party, wallowing in a government crisis, finally came up with a dark horse candidate to head the West German government. He was Kurt Georg Kiesinger, 62, silver-haired lawyer and minister-president of the State of Baden-Wurtemberg.

Kiesinger, a former Nazi, will now attempt to put together a coalition government. The present crisis came about when the Free Democrats withdrew from their coalition with the Christian Democrats over Erhard's plan to raise taxes to meet a budget deficit. It remained to be seen if Kiesinger could bring the Free Democrats back into coalition, or get the support of the Social Democrats.

Six thousand Communists gathered in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses to celebrate the 49th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution. As the speaker came to that part of the anniversary message which said events in Red China today had "nothing to do with Marxism or with the policies of socialism," Chinese Charge' d'Affaires Chang Teh-tsuen arose and walked from the hall in protest.

The following day he took another walk. This one occurred when Soviet Defense Minister Rodion Y. Malinovsky was speaking to massed thousands from atop Lenin's Tomb in Red Square.

"We regret that the leaders of China oppose the unity of action by the Socialist countries in support of the Vietnamese people," Malinovsky said. Chang ostentatiously strode from the diplomatic stand and walked off down the square. Happy anniversary, comrades.

To the Hindus of India, the cow is a sacred animal which may not be slaughtered for food. But in a land that has 175 million cows, along with intense poverty and severe food shortages, there have been moves toward cow slaughter.

To prevent this, nearly 200,000 demonstrators massed in front of Parliament in New Delhi on Monday. When the crowd, roused by Hindu holy men, got out of hand, police opened fire. In the ensuing riot, eight persons were killed and over 100 injured.

As the crisis developed later in the week, the government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was shaken. She fired the home minister, Gulzarilal Nanda, who had charge of police, and took the portfolio herself.

Other cracks and tensions began to appear in the government and the future of Mrs. Gandhi's rule was far from clear. Nearly 1,500 persons had been arrested by week's end, and mass demonstrations were called for Sunday.

Week in Business

By SALLY RYAN

NEW YORK (AP) — The business community may have more influence in shaping government economic policy in the wave of Tuesday's election.

Big Republican gains in Congress were interpreted by some during the week as likely to provide a rein on federal expenditures and ease some of the pressure for a tax increase to curb inflation.

Stock prices rallied briskly in news of the Republican gains. Brokers saw the returns as a hope for a cutback in federal spending and less Treasury borrowing, which would relieve upward pressure on interest rates.

The Republicans will consider going along with higher taxes only if President Johnson submits an austerity budget drastically cutting "Great Society" spending, said Rep. John W. Byrnes of Wisconsin, the ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee.

Even then Johnson would have to demonstrate that a tax increase was necessary, Bynres said.

Byrnes said the Republicans would seek three more seats on the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee. It will be minus three defeated Democrats who usually supported the administration.

In the Senate, John J. Sparkman of Alabama will take over as chairman of the Banking Committee, which will be minus a leading liberal Democrat, Paul H. Douglas. Charles H. Percy's victory in Illinois eliminated Douglas, who would have been chairman of the Senate-House Economic Committee.

Bankers said the 90th Congress might be less inclined than the 89th to swallow deliberately incurred budget deficits.

For months businessmen and economists, Republicans and Democrats, have speculated about the possibility of a tax increase after the election, a little something to take some of the steam out of an economy swollen by heavy spending for the war in Viet Nam and the Great Society.

Interest rates have soared as the Federal Reserve system applied brakes.

During the week, Alfred Hayes, the New York Federal Reserve Bank president, said there still was a clear and present danger of inflation, despite some cooling off in recent weeks.

He added he still advocates a tax increase.

Hayes challenged President Johnson's statement that there "had been a very healthy movement toward price stability in recent weeks."

Hayes said the administration's wage-price guidelines had been threatened with extinction.

"If these demands are granted and there seems to be not enough determination to resist them, there will be inevitable upward pressure on prices," Hayes said.

A spokesman for International Harvester cited wage pressures this week as one reason the company was joining the move to increase farm equipment prices.

"We have a cost-of-living clause in our contract so our wages have gone up several times this year," he said.

International Harvester, Deere & Co., Allis-Chalmers and J.I. Case raised the prices of tractors, combines, plows and corn pickers two to nine per cent.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman criticized the increases, and said they added to inflationary pressures on the economy.

"The increases are likely to be disturbing to housewives who are now picketing grocery chains for lower food prices," Freeman said.

He estimated farmers would pay an additional $200 million for operating equipment next year.

That wasn't the only bad news for farmers.

International Minerals & Chemical Corp. announced it would raise the price of potash, a key fertilizer material, five to seven per cent Jan. 1.

The week's round of price increases also included water treatment equipment, alum used by the pulp and paper industry and steel used to make drills, tool bits and cutting tools.

Stainless steel went up too, just a week after the price of nickel was increased. Nickel is used in stainless steel. It also is used in nickel-bearing copper alloys, and those prices have gone up, too.

Steel production has declined for four straight weeks. But the output for the year is slightly ahead of a year ago.

Automobile production was cut by storms and a strike at a General Motors plant. Production was seven per cent less than a year ago.

The Commerce Department during the week blamed a slackening of automobile sales for a decline in corporate profits in the three months ended Sept. 30.

Profits ran at a seasonally adjusted rate of $79.5 billion, down from a record $80 billion in the first quarter and $79.9 billion in the second.

The Commerce Department also reported that the gross national product — the total output of goods and services — rose more slowly than originally estimated. The gain from the June quarter was $12.3 billion, down from the $13.7 billion previously estimated, making the seasonally adjusted annual rate $744.6 billion.

William B. Camp, a Texan, was named by President Johnson to succeed his chief the controversial James J. Saxon, as controller of the currency.

Ralph S. Saul, a lawyer and former Securities and Exchange Commission official succeeded Edwin D. Etherington as president of the American Stock Exchange.

Etherington, who resigned to become president of Wesleyan University, chided the SEC in his farewell address. He criticized what he called premature government efforts to regulate some aspects of the securities industry.

Graft In Viet Nam Costly

EDITOR'S NOTE—While American and South Vietnamese soldiers fight to the death in the jungles, a small minority of South Vietnamese and Americans are making a profit out of the war by at least half a million dollars daily—perhaps much more. Profiteering, graft and corruption are costing U.S. taxpayers millions. A team of Associated Press reporters working for months has uncovered numerous cases of graft, theft, and bribery.

By FRED S. HOFFMAN and HUGH A. MULLIGAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Among the traditional by-products of war are theft, bribery, black marketeering, currency manipulation and waste.

In the Vietnamese conflict these corrosive influences on the conscience and economy of a nation have developed on an unprecedented scale for the size of the war.

A two-month study by a team of Associated Press reporters found that unquestionably hundreds of millions of U.S. taxpayer dollars have gone, and are going, down the drain.

How much—$500 million, $750 million, a billion?

Despite several congressional investigations and many lesser studies, no official measure of such losses has so far emerged.

However, as you travel the periphery of the problem, and then bore deeper into it, knowledgeable people in Viet Nam cite percentages ranging up to 40 per cent.

On just economic imports and post-exchange supplies the loss figure which crops up most often is 20 per cent.

The figure of five per cent is consistently cited as the probable loss in straight military aid items.

Based on the $715-million annual economic aid and surplus food programs and a PX supply inflow of nearly $150 million a year, a 20 per cent loss in those areas alone would mean a U.S. taxpayer bill of $175 million in the fiscal year that ended in June or nearly half a million dollars daily. And that was only one year.

A five per cent loss on military aid would translate into even more colossal sums.

In the past 10 years, the United States has spent more than $5 billion in direct economic and military aid to South Viet Nam. That does not include the billions now being spent on the massive American involvement in the fighting.

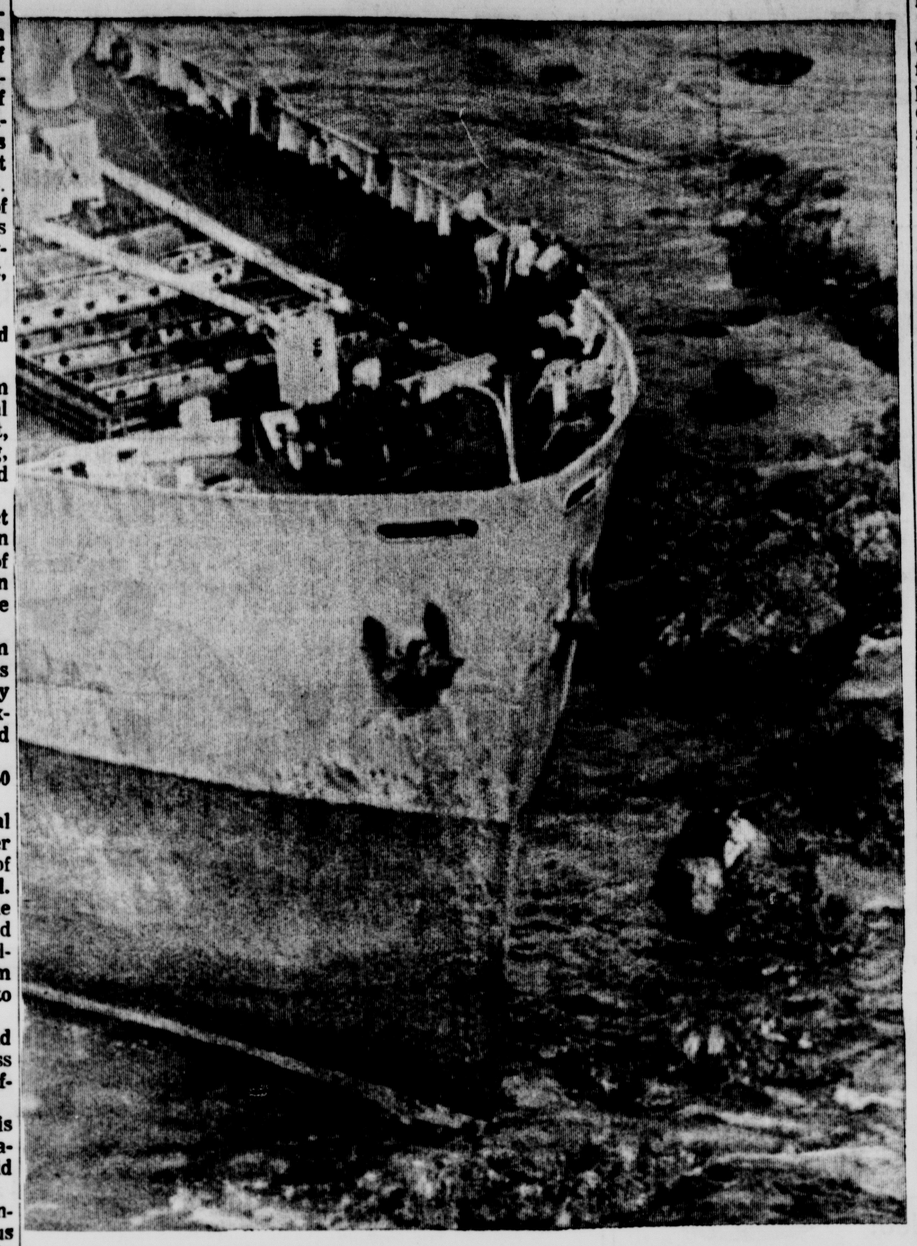
Within the past fiscal year, U.S. aid to keep the South Vietnamese army in the field and to prop up the civilian economy has drawn about $1.2 billion from the U.S. Treasury.

Over-all, losses have reached such proportions that the problem was reported by several sources to have been the subject of a secret meeting between President Johnson, Premier Nguyen Cao Ky of South Viet Nam and top U.S. aid officials in Manila during the President's Far Eastern trip last month.

At the conference, a single insurance company reportedly was cited as having received $4 million in loss claims for economic aid items alone in a 120-day period. There were suggestions that a smuggling ring was at work, with tentacles extending to Singapore, Burma and other Asiatic points.

In Washington, an official of the U.S. Agency for International Development—AID—discounted the smuggling ring idea, insisting that the evidence pointed to a multitude of small, independent depredations.

But the spokesman said no possibility was being ruled out in attempts to plug the leaks.



SAN CLEMENTE ISLAND, Calif.—Crewmen of Greek freighter White Eagle look over the side after the ship ran aground about 65 miles off the California coast. An attempt will be made to pull it off the island by tug. (UPI)

An Associated Press team found a wide range of open theft, currency manipulation, black marketing, bribery, profiteering, payoffs, scrounging and similar machinations both petty and vast. Episodes covered a spectrum from South Vietnamese "ghost battalions" with padded payrolls to the disappearance of cases of beer—and an entire coastal freighter loaded with cement, possibly by accident, possibly by design.

Members of the AP team ranged the field and backwaters of Viet Nam, worked in Saigon and Washington, interviewed a large array of sources including generals and admirals, construction bosses, Vietnamese officials and policemen, province aid representatives, PX clerks — even the girls in conical hats peddling PX items in Saigon's streets.

Clearly the great majority of the people in Viet Nam were fighting the war and trying to make an honest living. The malefactors were the minority, but a busy one.

A few examples of what the AP reporters found:

1. A stolen U.S. Army generator lighting a Saigon night club.

2. U.S. irrigation pumps intended for the rice-growing delta in use by privately owned car wash stations.

3. An entire boatload of beer stolen.

4. A truck piled high with PX goods wending its way through a narrow alley, where a wire strung overhead lops off the top packing cases.

5. Counterfeit U.S. military scrip and bogus PX cards appearing almost as fast as the real thing.

6. A minority of unscrupulous Americans, both civilians and soldiers, skimming off millions wheeling and dealing in U.S. dollars and Vietnamese piasters while the majority of American soldiers fought and died in jungles and rice paddies.

7. Pilferage — by both Vietnamese and Americans — adding millions to the cost of projects undertaken by private U.S. construction firms.

8. Persons in high places and low places in the South Vietnamese military structure feathering their nests by siphoning off U.S. aid funds.

9. One small ship loaded with cement and other building materials simply disappeared somewhere off Viet Nam. Whether it was boarded and seized by thieves, deliberately diverted from its Saigon destination or went to the bottom accidentally is still officially unknown.

10. Across the river from Saigon is a pirate peninsula called An Khanh which provides an open base for receiving stolen and smuggled goods free of intervention by customs agents.

Two salient points emerged from the AP study:

1. The United States probably will never know how much of its goods have been stolen, how much of its supplies, materials, foodstuffs and direct financial aid has been misused in Viet Nam.

The reason? Until recently, record keeping was haphazard or nonexistent. Audits now getting under way are considered with the present and the future, not with the past.

In the case of military aid to South Viet Nam, there has not been an audit since 1960, a period in which $2 billion was spent training and equipping the Vietnamese army, navy and air force.

"I would shudder at the problem of trying to reconstruct what happened to all that tonnage we pumped into Viet Nam during the buildup last fall and winter," said a top investigator for the General Accounting Office.

2. No matter how many controls and safeguards the Defense Department and AID apply, the South Vietnamese government, military and business structures likely will continue to be sieves through which millions of American dollars will leak out of sight.

In rice imports paid for in American dollars, to cite just one example, there are no real American controls — only occasional spot checks once the bags clear the customs house. There are indications that much food, lumber, medicines and fertilizers never reach the poor, but go to enrich provincial and district officials. And some items reach the Viet Cong.

Why such slender U.S. control over so vital a program? Because South Viet Nam is still regarded as a sovereign country, despite the overwhelming American presence.

Short of abrogating this sovereignty, an AID official said, "the only way to plug the leak would be to post an American at the side of virtually every South Vietnamese official or businessman involved — an obvious impracticality, an impossibility."

Four battalions of infantrymen from the U. S. 1st Division spent a week in the jungles along bitterly contested Highway 13, risking ambush and sniper fire, mines and mortars, to protect the long line of more than 700 trucks.

The strategic convoy should have made the French planters in the border provinces happy.

The trucks brought rice to feed the thousands of people living off the plantations,and they brought nearly a third of the area's annual rubber production to the Saigon docks, 80 miles away, without a cent of "taxes" being levied by the Viet Cong.

But the planters were far from happy. They told the Associated Press investigators that officers of the South Vietnamese forces had exacted a rakeoff equal to about $10,000 in American money.

In addition, a delegation of noncommissioned officers called at the office of one plantation and demanded a contribution to the division's "social welfare fund."

Plantation officials declined to say how much was coughed up, but one indicated the combined payoff more than tripled the cost of getting the rubber out.

He said he hoped no publicity would be given to the incident lest "unsophisticated readers" back home get an exaggerated idea of corruption in Viet Nam.

How about thievery on construction projects?

"Where thievery is concerned," complained a construction boss at one of the big airstrips being built almost overnight by a combination of America know-how and Vietnamese labor, "These people seem to have a different set of values.

"To steal is all right, so long as you don't get caught.

"Pilferage and diversion got on at all echelons of the Vietnamese social structure — it is not limited to the peasantry.

"The larger stuff, like bulldozers and generators, we usually get back sooner or later, but the great percentage of unaccountable materials and supplies would take an army to protect."

Another construction man, James A. Lilly, general manager of the RMK consortium in Viet Nam, blamed the U.S. mili-

Study Cost Of Missile Defense Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara says the Soviet Union is deploying an antimissile system and the United States is considering whether to set up one.

The cost of such a system designed to fend off long-range ballistic missiles would be enormous, ranging perhaps as high as $30 billion.

McNamara made his statement, believed to be his first public comment on the Soviet defense system, to newsmen Thursday at President Johnson's Texas ranch. He said he and the President had discussed the antiballistic missile system and will have further talks about them.

The defense chief stressed there is "no question of our capability to penetrate Soviet defenses with missiles and aircraft" at this time.

He said the Soviet Union started laying out an antiballistic missile (ABM) defense some time ago and "we must assume" for planning purposes that it will be effective when it is fully activated.

The United States has such a system — known as Nike X — in the works but has withheld a decision to begin erecting the necessary interceptor missile sites, radar and associated command and control equipment.

The huge cost — ranging from $4 billion to as much as $30 billion, depending on its depth and sophistication — has been a factor in the delaying of any decision to establish an antimissile system.

And McNamara is known to have reservations about such a system's effectiveness.

McNamara said the Nike X, along with the Soviet ABM deployment and the developing Chinese nuclear threat were all part of his discussions with the President on the 1968 defense budget.

He said it is "much too early" to set up a missile defense geared against the type of attack Red China might be capable of launching against the United States in the next few years.

Despite Red China's recent successful test of a nuclear-tipped missile, McNamara believes the Chinese Communists will be no significant nuclear threat until around the mid 1970s.

But his comment that the United States "must assume" the Soviet antimissile system will be effective indicated serious consideration is being given to proceeding with deployment of Nike X next year.

In the area of U.S. offensive systems, McNamara said he expects to send Congress a recommendation for outfitting the nation's Polar submarines with an improved atomic missile known as Poseidon.

McNamara said deployment of the Poseidons in place of present ICBM's aboard the nuclear subs would run into "several billions" of dollars.

Republicans Gain 700 Seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans have gained 19 chambers and about 700 seats in state legislatures, most of them apparently as a side effect of their gubernatorial and congressional election comeback.

The biggest GOP legislative surge from Tuesday's balloting was in the Midwest, an Associated Press survey show. Republicans recaptured the Senate and created a House tie in Michigan, and picked up one house in each of five other Midwest states.

Republicans won over both houses in Alaska, Arizona, Maine and Utah.

Only in Connecticut was there a major Democratic victory — but it came mostly because ancient rural - oriented boundaries of the General Assembly were redrawn to give urban areas equal voice.

But state after state reported Republican legislative pickups about in line with statewide or congressional races.

Many victories simply canceled gains the Democrats had registered in normally Republican states during the 1964 Johnson landslide, when Republicans lost 529 seats.

In several states, reapportionment changed the size of lawmaking bodies, complicating precise before-and-after comparisons. And scattered races remained in doubt, such as the two-vote victory by one Republican in Hawaii.

But the approximate totals showed Republicans gaining nearly 900 seats in 68 of the 87 chambers for which there was balloting. Democrats cut the net GOP gain back to about 700 by gaining in 12 chambers — but 129 seats of their pickup came in the huge Connecticut assembly, where a 3-2 Republican margin was turned into a 2-1 Democratic edge.

The over-all results leave 29 state senate in Democratic hands, 19 with Republicans and one tied. Democrats control 25 lower houses to 23 for the Republicans and one tied.

Gives Away Destroyer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The city's Recreation and Park Commission gave National Metal and Steel Corp. permission Thursday to cut up and cart away a destroyer that went aground at nearby Sharp Park.

The decommissioned George A. Johnson drifted ashore at Pacifica after a tow line snapped while it was en route to a San Pedro scrap heap in Southern California.

Graft In Viet Nam Costly

tary for some of the headaches.

"The military," said Lilly, "has flatly refused to assume security obligations.

"We represent foreign interests in a sovereign land. Our 30-odd construction sites are patrolled by a security force of 1,200 Vietnamese armed with nothing more than an arm band. We are not allowed to shoot at looters.

"A GI can drive up to a supply yard in his six-by-six truck, wave a carbine at the Vietnamese guards, order them to open the gates and load up with everything he wants.

"Scrounging is a fine art here. Every soldier wants to improve his lot and get out of the mud."

RMK, Viet Nam's largest employer, has dotted the land with huge warehouses, jet airstrips, deep water ports and other facilities that are nothing short of overnight miracles. The initials RMK are a contraction for the four big contractors making up the consortium: Raymound International of Delaware, Inc.; Morrison-Knudsen Co. of Asia, Inc.; Brown & Root, Inc., and J. A. Jones Construction Co.

Navy and Pentagon officials supervising the contracts, which will reach $800 million, take a sympathetic attitude toward the combine's problems.

They applaud the contractors for taking a job in rough, dangerous terrain, with unskilled labor that had to be trained on the spot, when others in the field were reluctant to step in.

Navy and defense auditing officials say flatly that the big consortium has not kited costs.

The costs, however, have ballooned by some $200 million, which Pentagon officials say is a result of their own errors in underestimating the project costs.

Losses estimated at under $5 million have resulted from pilferage and theft at construction sites. More millions were lost from double ordering, goods damaged by hasty unloading and lack of warehousing, weak management at some of the 37 major construction sites and a labor turnover that approaches 50 per cent a year.

RMK has been accused of overpurchasing in heavy equipment, with the result that Uncle Sam had to foot the bill for the excess.

But Navy officials supervising the contracts say that many of the 5,000 bulldozers and other heavy equipment not used by RMK as it phases out its projects will be turned over to Army Engineers and Seabees who are taking over a larger than expected share of the work.

Most construction bosses and dock officials can tell you endless tales of GI enterpreneurs hijacking a refrigerator, a beer cooler, screen doors and hundreds of other items to improve living conditions in their areas.

GIs armed with empty clipboards have been found roaming around Can Ranh Bay, the Saigon harbor and other key unloading points ordering the Vietnamese workers to load up their unit trucks.

If war doesn't bring out the worst in some people, it at least provides the opportunities.

American GIs support and sustain the black market on PX goods and C-ration commodities. Some construction workers have been sent home for currency manipulation and smuggling. So have other U.S. civilians.

Statistics on major U.S. investigations, Court Martial cases and disciplinary acions do not give the full picture because in time of war the military traditionally deals with such problems by assigning the culprits to work details, and even to combat units, rather than go through the long legal procedure.

By fall of this year, there were at least 400 servicemen and civilians facing official action for some kind of profiteering or black market operations. RMK says it sent "upwards of 30" of its American workers home for currency manipulation.

Alaska Barge and Transport, Inc., which offloads ship cargoes by barge, acknowledges firing "four or five" supervisory personnel for failure to cooperate with an investigation of reported pilferage.

There is no U.S. law against converting currency at advantageous rates but the United States tries to get at currency manipulators via the tax route. To date, 70 of the more flagrant cases, some reportedly in the neighborhood of $50,000, are under investigation by the Internal Revenue Service. Most invilve civilians.

One Treasury official in Washington says he has seen a figure of "between $25 million and $30 million a year" as representing the dollar outflow from Viet Nam from currency speculation.

The French, who fought here in frustration for 20 years called theirs "the happy war" — there was a little something in it for everybody, even the enemy. What does the enemy get out of this one?

There is no way of assessing how much American aid, military or economic, winds up ir the hands of the Viet Cong.

When allied troops overrun an ancampment of the Viet Cong or the PAVN (Peoples Army of North Viet Nam) they usually find rice, sometimes in AID sacks, medicine with American brand names, and small entrenching tools of the type used to dig tunnels and fortifications.

Even in these cases, it is difficult to determine, say American military and aid sources, whether the medicine has been stolen from military or civilian supplies, whether it was smuggled in from Cambodia or Laos or by ship from Europe, or whether it was purchased openly in South Vietnamese shops.

American investigators say it is difficult to follow the trail of drugs. But they note that only a few days after certain items become available on the market they disappear completely from store shelves, leading to the suspicion that Viet Cong agents have bought them up.

At Ba Hao, 50 miles from Saigon, the U.S. 196th Light Infantry Brigade recently captured a Viet Cong camp and uncovered a big hoard of goods mostly stolen or diverted from U.S. economic AID supplies.

There were more than a million and a quarter pounds of AID rice, 440 gallons of gasoline, 600 gallons of cooking oil, 88 shovels, 750 pounds of salt.

The Viet Cong control most of the roads and waterways throughout Viet nam, which enables them to exact money and a portion of moving cargoes — including supplies from America — as tribute.

It has long been suspected, even admitted in official but off the record conversations, that the surviving rubber plantations in Viet Nam are forced to supply the Viet Cong with rice, medicine and money through an "accommodation" that enables the growers to operate.

Because rubber is still Viet Nam's largest export, and hundreds of thousands depend on the plantation for a livelihood, the government of South Viet Nam tolerates the accommodation.

Plantation workers and their families receive rice purchased under the commercial import program. Plantation hospitals are supplied with American drugs. Informed sources say the Viet Cong tribute is exacted in a ratio of 30 per cent rice, 30 per cent drugs and the rest in labor or rubber.

Rice is the staple food of Viet Nam. The country used to export it; now South Viet Nam mmust import rice, mostly from the united states) to help feed the population.

And some of the most flagrant profiteering occurs on rice.

Theoretically, licensed importers buy the rice at 1,450 piasters (about $12.30) per 100 kilos (220 pounds). They're supposed to sell it locally at a small and controlled profit. Only it often doesn't work that way.

In practice, the importer has to pay an under the table fee for security clearance to get his license. Then perhaps he shells out another fee to the official issuing the license. And this process of multiple payoff is repeated as the rice moves from the province capital to the district capital and then on to the villages and hamlets.

By the time it reaches the peasant (if indeed it does) the price has reached 3,100 piasters per 100 kilo sack. A markup of nearly 200 per cent.

Add suchViet Cong exactions as the 30 per cent in plantation areas, diversion of additional rice to Viet Cong by other methods, and the supply reaching the peasantry is reduced further — something that scarcely contributes to the happiness of the countryside.

While U.S. authorities, in the face of continuing depredations, have initiated a general tightening-up, the supply of stolen goods is so great that an entirepeninsula directly across the river from downtown Saigon has been turned into a lawless no-man's land to handle stolen goods or smuggled cargoes from ships.

You can walk about the peninsula, as AP photographer Cung did, and find air conditioners selling for 25,000 piasters, all sorts of automobile and jeep tires, government equipment of every kind.

When Cung began taking pictures, the people began throwing bricks and bottles at him.

For fear of their lives, customs men never go to An Khanh, as the peninsula is called. There aren o police.

Theare a is militarily secure from the Viet Cong, being almost in the city of Saigon. But it is a pirates' peninsula, the receiving point for all goods stolen from boats.

Divers live on the peninsula and spend their days going after stuff purposely chucked overboard.

Police sources say they are convinced the entire smuggling and pilferage operation on An Khanh is the work of anorganized gang, a syndicate with connections at high government level. They won't name any names, however.

The government of Premier Ky has promised repeatedly to crack down on war profiteers and black marketeers. So far, the crackdown has manifested itself only in the public execution of a Chinese businessman for black marketing and bribery, and in the setting up of a special office to deal with corruption.

On the U.S. side, currency manipulation has been among the problems. The military, in taking steps to counteract it, recently announced some cases when culprits were caught:

A senior non commissioned officer was demoted two grades and fined $1,200 for swapping dollars for piasters at an inflated rate.

An officer convicted by a general court martial of smuggling liquor and cigarettes into Thailand was cashiered and fined nearly $3,000.

An enlisted man who bought PX items for his girl friend — who in turn passed them on to the black market — was given a bad conduct discharge and sentenced to a year at hard labor.

Aware of various forms of depredation, the U.S. Defense Department put into effect a series of measures to foil them.

To combat currency manipulation, the military has instituted a system under which the provost marshal keeps a close check on all outgoing money orders. If a man sends home an unusually large amount of money, he is ordered to explain. One officer with a yearly income of $10,000 sent home $20,000 and was caught.

Certain reforms and checking procedures have been introduced in other areas.

Container ships bring materials on hermetically sealed containers too big and too tightly packed to be looted with ease.

Whole truck loads of crated goods are wrapped in steel bands to keep women and children from hopping aboard and knocking boxes off.

In some staging areas watch dogs now patrol goods stacked in the open, and big contractors have brought in million-dollar computers to keep an inventory of their mountains of equipment and materials.

The U.S. Defense Department has put into effect a series of measures intended to cut off the leakage of post exchange goods to Saigon's booming black market.

Among other things, these included:

1. About 6,000 civilians were cut off from PX privileges.

2. Other civilians have been limited to buying items under $10 in value.

3. Some civilians have had their liquor ration cut in half and are barred from purchasing such luxuries as tape recorders, cameras and radios.

4. GIs are limited in the quantity of luxury items they can purchase in the $10-plus range.

The military command has issued new post exchange cards, serially numbered and printed on watermarked paper to discourage counterfeiting. However, military police officials report professional forgers already are at work duplicating PX cards at the going price of about 2,000 piasters per card.

There already is tangible evidence that some of the controls are having effect. Phony U.S. goods are showing up on the black market for the first time, indicating a shortage of the real thing.

Liquor bottles are being collected and expertly refilled, with the happy result that Saigon garbage is now being picked up rather regularly — by bottle scavengers.

To protect military goods moving through Saigon, a third military police company was added during the summer and a special military security office set up to guard all military unloading and movement at the port.

MPs now escort all convoys of military goods trucks from port to warehouse.

Most AID goods still arrive in portable quantities and are thus vulnerable to continuing pilferage. Under recent agreements the military is taking over more and more of the security and cargo handling responsibilities from AID, because AID does not have the same resources.

Still, despite all the newly introduced controls, there is no evidence of a foolproof solution to this multimillion-dollar headache.

The black market goes full blast just down the street from the U.S. Embassy. Goods disappear every day from the docks right under the noses of MPs and Vietnamese guards.

Ships go astray. Barges disappear. Trucks never reach their destinations. A school house roof winds up on some minor official's chicken coops.

An American oil company ordered three three-ton air conditioners for its new office building. One reached the building. One is missing, perhaps forever.

The third? They just found that one in a new governmental building.

LOS ANGELES—The Goodyear blimp, "Columbia" hangs limply from high tension lines after it lost power and settled to the ground. A large hole was ripped in the side of the airship and it deflated. Two crewmen aboard, a pilot and co-pilot, escaped injury. (UPI)

Priest Dies In Viet Nam Battle Area

DAU TIENG, South Viet Nam (AP) — "My place is with them," Chaplain Michael J. Quealy replied when a 1st Division officer tried to dissuade him from boarding a helicopter to join American troops under heavy jungle attack. Hours later, he was killed by Viet Cong fire as he gave the last rites to a dying soldier.

Father Quealy, a Roman Catholic from New York City, was the fifth U.S. chaplain to die in Viet Nam. He had volunteered for Army duty after three years at a church in a suburb of Mobile, Ala., and arrived in Viet Nam Jan. 25.

Father Quealy was assigned to the 2nd Battalion of the 1st Division's 28th Regiment, but when word reached forward headquarters Tuesday morning that the regiment's 1st Battalion was heavily engaged in the battle in Tay Ninh Province, he decided to go to it.

He reached the battalion in War Zone C, northwest of Saigon. A Viet Cong attack before dawn had been repelled with the help of artillery but the enemy was regrouping.

Ignoring the battle, he gave the last rites to several dying U.S. soldiers.

The Viet Cong made another attack. A Communist soldier carrying a machine gun jumped from the bushes as Father Quealy attended the last of the dying men and shot the chaplain in the head and stomach.

Father Quealy died moments later, not knowing that the Viet Cong attack had failed.

Radio Gets Big Salute From Stars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The wonderful world of radio gets a salute Sunday night when Charlie McCarthy, aided by a fellow named Edgar Bergen, hosts a show on NBC radio in honor of the network's 40th anniversary.

The elusive Mr. McCarthy was unavailable for an interview, but Bergen agreed to talk over lunch at a Chinese restaurant on Sunset Boulevard.

This is the third of Bergen's annual harkbacks to radio's glorious days. The first contained excerpts from his old Chase & Sanborn show, the second was a tribute to the late Fred Allen.

"The new show has some marvelous stuff in it," said the ventriloquist. "We've got forty different stars, and there are some hilarious routines with Ed Wynn and with Groucho Marx. Amos 'n' Andy are on it, and Lum and Abner, too.

"Then we have many of the great historical events of the past forty years — Edward VIII's abdication speech, the Hindenburg disaster, etc. We have a real gamut, everoyne from Winston Churchill to Mortimer Snerd!"

Bergen and McCarthy and their cloddish friend Mortimer were among the biggest stars of radio's golden years in the 1930s and 1940s. The era of bigtime network shows ended when talent and advertising money moved into television.

During television's early years, Bergen performed on one-hour specials and a quiz show — "Do You Trust Your Wife?" — and he now makes a few guest appearances. He is content not to be faced with a weekly comedy show.

"I guess I got lazy a little earlier than most," he commented. "I don't know why the others try to make it on a weekly basis. Look at Milton Berle. He can be an excellent comedian, but he burns himself out by trying a weekly show, and now he is canceled.

"Bob Hope has the right idea. He spreads himself out to one show a month and leaves the audience wanting more. It would make much more sense if other comedians would do that and give a chance for others. I feel sorry for the thousands of talented performers throughout this country who will never get a chance to demonstrate what they can do."

Nominated For Fellowship At KU

William E. Hurt, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hurt, 910 State Fair Blvd., was one of 143 students at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan., nominated for consideration for Woodrow Wilson fellowships by K.U. professors.

These fellowships are intended to encourage gifted students to make college teaching a career.

Students must be nominated by a professor in order to enter the competition. Woodrow Wilson Fellows get one academic year of graduate education, with their tuition and fees paid by the foundation, a living stipend of $2,000, and allowances for their dependent children. The graduate school they choose to attend receives an additional grant. Funds are from the Ford Foundation.

Religion In The News

BY GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In a period of Roman Catholic readjustments, the Church's United States bishops meet Monday in Washington, with prospects in the offing for more representative Church direction in this country.

For the first time, the approximately 250 bishops are to elect a president and other officers — instead of the presiding post being filled automatically by seniority, as in the past.

The step is part of a structural reorganization, aimed at providing for more mutually developed guidance of the Church in America.

That pattern was set by the second Vatican Council, which delegated wide leeway to national episcopal conferences for determining many practices and policies in their own areas. The week-long annual meeting of U.S. bishops will be their first since the council ended last year.

The Church is undergoing "a peaceful and orderly revolution," Francis Cardinal Spellman, archbishop of New York, said recently. "Nothing short of that would meet the emerging needs of modern man."

Among other things, the bishops are expected to abolish the rule of abstinence from meat on Fridays — a ban already lifted in Canada, Italy, and, most recently, in France.

With heightened interest focused on the session, there has been a tide of suggestions and speculation about possible actions.

That outpouring, in itself, was part of the Church's new emphasis on communal-type governance, with priests and laity encouraged by the conciliar decrees to express their views freely.

However, calls have sounded in numerous Catholic quarters for establishment of some kind of regular channels for communicating those views — as has occurred in some individual dioceses, notably in St. Louis.

"We need structures that will make it possible for the layman to share more fully in the deliberations of and responsibility for the Church," James O'Gara writes in the lay-edited Catholic weekly, Commonweal.

In an editorial entitled, "to the bishops," he adds: "It is not enough to tell the layman to participate — how is he to do it? The American bishops should strongly encourage current efforts to apply collegiality on every level of the Church."

The term, "collegiality," has emerged as the term for describing the bishops' clarified role of sharing in church government with the Pope.

There also have been suggestions lately that the Church return to the ancient Christian tradition of letting the people have a direct voice in the choosing of their bishops.

Ruth Circle Holds Regular Meeting

Mrs. Lena Ray was hostess to the Ruth Circle of Green Ridge Presbyterian Church on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 19 at her home in Green Ridge.

Mrs. Verna Palmer opened the meeting with a poem "Not I," by Hazel N. Lang, and prayer. Mrs. Allen Kendrick gave the lesson, "The Heart of Appalichia" and Mrs. Russell H. Miller gave the Mission Year Book of Prayer servce for doctors and nurses of the Miraja Medical Center in India and for the teachers, directors and supervisors of the Ming Quong Children's Center in the Presbytery of San Jose, Calif.

The Thank offering envelopes were passed out and the annual offering for the UPW Association was received. This is a free will offering and the Ruth Circle received more than the quota assigned, more than $100 dollars.

Extension's Youth Program

Youth programs of the University of Missouri Extension Division are designed to provide opportunities for self-education and development of boys and girls through their own voluntary efforts.

Good progress was made this past year in extending the educational and services resources of the University of Missouri, both directly and indirectly, to the youth of Missouri. More than 80,000 young people were reached directly, plus a much larger number who were assisted indirectly by Extension personnel as a result of work with their parents and the lay and professional youth leaders of the various youth serving organizations of the state.

In most cases, the University's educationaf and services resources are extended to youth, both rural and urban, through three approaches. For example, 35,000 boys and girls were reached through what we think of as the organizational approach or which is known best and by the most people in Missouri, nationally and internationally, as 4-H Club Work. 4-H Club Work is an informal educational program designed for boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 19, guided by adult volunteer leaders and administered by the University of Missouri Extension Division. These 35,000 boys and girls are enrolled in more than 1,600 local 4-H clubs in Missouri and under the guidance of more than 12,000 adults who volunteered their time, energies and talents to serve in one or more of the several leadership roles.

A second approach we referred to as the Interorganizational Approach. This involves one Extension Division's personnel extending the University of Missouri's educational and service resources toward helping the various youth-serving organizations and agencies reached, the objectives they have identified as worthy and consistent with the development needs of youth. This approach employs established channels of communication with professional and lay-leadership and may or may not involve direct contact on the part of Extension personnel with the youth themselves.

A third approach is referred to as the Extra-organizational approach. With this approach the element of organizational or agency identification is not significant. It is mostly interest or problem centered and endeavors to reach youth through informal educational settings such as special interest sessions, public meetings and mass media. Examples of this approach which have been quite successful throughout the state are in the areas of Career Exploration, Youth Leadership Seminars and Personnel Development Workshops. Another one is designed for parents. The focal point is youth development but the program concentration is on parent education.

The nature of both the problems and opportunities which youth face in today's society suggests that the total knowledge resources of the University of Missouri must be used if educational efforts are to be most successful and helpful to them.

Suspect For Four Months Feels Strain

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Robert S. Burlingame was sunning himself on the Iowa State Capitol lawn last July 1 when a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent told him he was wanted for questioning in a bank robbery.

That was the start of a 132-day ordeal which ended Thursday when U.S. District Judge Roy Stephenson dismissed a bank robbery charge filed by the FBI against Burlingame.

U.S. District Atty. Donald M. Statton said the FBI finally had established that Burlingame was in Minneapolis on June 22, as he claimed, when the $1,500 holdup of the Iowa-Des Moines National Bank occurred. Burlingame was free on bond throughout the ordeal.

He said Burlingame was a victim of mistaken identity. The bank teller, Miss Jo Ann Barberio, 25, identified Burlingame at his preliminary hearing as the man who pulled the noon-hour robbery.

How does it feel to be under suspicion?

"You have a constant subconscious feeling of strain," said Burlingame, 58, a former college professor, Des Moines newscaster and executive secretary of an employers association. "It was like a four-months-long nightmare."

He said, however, that his friends had stuck by him throughout and that was "the bright side of the cloud."

He said he was disappointed in the FBI for charging him on what he said apparently was flimsy evidence.

"I would like to know," Burlingame said, "why when most prosecutors have a policy that a prosecution will not be commenced based on a single uncorroborated eyewitness, an exception was apparently made in this case.

"Particularly I would like to know why I was arrested before anyone in Minneapolis was interviewed about my presence there. I am sure that is contrary to the policies of the FBI."

Three-Vehicle Smash Takes Life of One

PECULIAR, Mo. (AP)—John Isaac Rogers, 80, of Kansas City, Kan., was killed this morning in a three-vehicle accident, a mile and a half south of here on U. S. 71.

Gary Dale Smith, 24, Harrisonville Mo. was hospitalized with bruises and lacerations.

The Highway Patrol said Rogers, southbound, tried to pass a pickup truck on a hill, and struck Smith's car headon.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. — A coin-in-the-slot binocular on top of Sandia Mountain east of Albuquerque gained the features of a monster from outer space when a freeze hit the area earlier this week. The photographer admitted the attached pair of gloves helped to complete the wintry scene. (UPI)

Judges Get Chance To Review Case

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Georgia's undecided gubernatorial election went today to three federal judges who were asked to bar the Legislature from choosing a chief executive.

The federal panel hearing was spawned from two suits growing out of the election Tuesday where neither Republican Howard H. Callaway nor Democrat Lester G. Maddox received a majority of votes.

Write-in votes for former Gov. Ellis G. Arnall kept both major candidates below the 50 per cent mark, which, under the Georgia constitution, forces the General Assembly to choose between the top two.

With all the state's 1,893 precincts reporting, the vote was Maddox 445,359, or 47 per cent; Callaway 442,871, or 46.8 per cent, and Arnall 57,699 or 6 per cent.

The American Civil Libarties Union filed the first suit. It wanted the court to allow no election by the Legislature until it is fully reapportioned, which under an existing court order must be done by next May 1.

A bipartisan group of 12 voters filed the second suit Thursday, asking the court to call a runoff election and contending legislative choice of a governor is unconstitutional because it is "an invalid unit system of election."

Maddox, 51, a segregationist who sold his cafeteria rather than serve Negroes, is in favor of the predominantly Democratic Legislature choosing the governor.

Callaway, 39, heir to a textile fortune, prefers a runoff election.

Ladies Trying For Power In Red Chinese Regime

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

HONG KONG (AP) — Accocding to signs and portents, high-ranking ladies in Communist China have got themselves involved in a dandy political match.

As if the convulsions of a major contest for control of China among the men were not enough, China-watchers also see evidence of a sort of ladies' auxiliary power struggle.

This is the way the situation looks:

Chiang Ching, third wife of Mao Tse-tung, has risen suddenly to political prominence. She is given relatively high rank in the listings of Central Committee leaders attending various public functions and applauding teen-age Red Guard hoodlums.

This former actress is described by knowledgeable Chinese in Hong Kong a vindictive tiger-lady.

Apparently, she had been brooding about the state of things among the ranking women of Red China.

For one thing, Wang Kuang-mei, the wife of President Liu Shao-chi, was getting all the public glory while Chiang Ching sat at home, playing the dutiful but uncelebrated spouse of the great but aging and ailing leader.

Wang Kuang-mei got to go to Indonesia, Burma, Cambodia and North Viet Nam, among other glamorous foreign places, when her husband undertook diplomatic missions. She was lionized by the cream of Oriental Communist society. It was too much.

Worse than that, Wang Kuang-mei had a suspicious background. It is not confirmed abroad, but she is believed to be the daughter of a once prominent official of the Manchu dynasty, and also the cultivated product of a Roman Catholic university education.

She worked as a nurse in Peking before the revolution. She did not marry Liu until 1949 when the revolution was succeeding. As his wife she had honors showered upon her, including deputy chairmanship of the All-China Women's Federation.

The chairman was another woman who was all too glamorous — Soong Ching-Ling, widow of the celebrated Sun Yat Sen of the 1911 Chinese republican revolution. The sister of Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek of Nationalist China, Soong Ching-ling was a boon to party propaganda.

Then there was Teng Ying-chao, the wife of Premier Chou En-lai. It was well known she had a capitalist background, although in her youth she was a female firebrand in China and a promoter in France of the Paris branch of the Chinese Communist party.

And where was Chiang Ching, the third wife of Mao? Who knew about her?

Came the power struggle among the men. Chiang Ching had her chance.

President Liu, once Mao's heir-apparent, seemed on the losing side. He was downgraded in the Politiburo from second to eighth place and would slip more if the others got strong enough to push him.

Chiang Ching began to blossom. Mrs. Liu came under attack.

On the night of Oct. 10, a Red Guard poster outside the International Club in Peking denounced Mrs. Liu as a counter-revolutionary and a revisionist — meaning pro-Soviet, a pretty bad offense these days.

She was invited to Peking University to confess and denounce herself. It is not a matter of public record whether she went, but Mrs. Liu was obviously in trouble.

One report, that she is undergoing some sort of corrective re-education at Chinghu University, cannot be confirmed.

Soong Ching-ling — Mrs. Sun — also got a whiff of trouble. Red Guards ransacked her Shanghai home and denounced her. They were told later on to lay off, but it was humilitating to a woman of her standing.

As for Mrs. Chou — Well, her husband is looking more and more these days like a careful government functionary, still listed high among the others but evidently lacking power. Some day Mrs. Chou may lose some of her public glitter, too.

Chiang Ching, at least for now, is doing all right. One reason seems to be that the dominant group among the men is packing the Central Committee with its own adherents.

Chiang Ching, Mrs. Mao Tse-tung, on the Central Committee, is a sure vote against Lieu Shao-chi.

Cuban Doings Strained For Mexicans

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's relations with Cuba are strained. Informed sources are saying Cuba may find there are limits to Mexican tolerance, although there are no signs at the moment that relations are near a critical stage.

Mexico is the only member of the Organization of American States which retains diplomatic ties with the Fidel Castro regime despite a 1964 OAS resolution that no member maintain such relations.

No pro-Castro sentiment is apparent here except among some extreme leftists. Diplomatic relations have been maintained to satisfy some internal leftist groups and also because Mexico has a policy of seeking to keep open contacts — maintaining "a bridge" of communications, as it has been described — for any eventuality.

The Mexican press is generally critical of Castro.

Some Mexicans suspect that Cuban influence was involved in recent student disturbances in several parts of the country. However, no proof of such influence, if there is any, has been made known.

Last August, Mexican authorities arrested pro-Castro writer Victor Rico Galan and 26 others for subversive activity. Rico Galan had visited Cuba often.

No date for the trial has been announced. Nine of the 27 arrested are being held without the right for release on bail.

At the end of September, the Cuban embassy's press secretary, Julian Lopez Diaz, was caught supplying funds to a Guatemalan smuggling ring that was running large quantities of arms from the United States and Mexico to Communist guerrillas in neighboring Guatemala.

After being held for a couple of days by Mexican authorities, the Cuban was allowed to return quietly to Havana.

Mexico has been making concentrated efforts to strengthen its relations with Guatemala and other Central American countries, so this Cuban activity seriously disturbed officials here.

Mexico has other problems in its relations with Cuba.

About 45 Cubans have been in asylum under protection of the Mexican embassy in Havana for a long time. Castro has refused to grant safe-conduct passes for them to leave Cuba.

Mexico has been criticized occasionally in other Latin American countries for allowing the Cubana Airline to fly between Havana and Mexico City — a route used by some Latin American leftists to get indoctrination in Cuba.

Mexico keeps a careful check on those travelers: Passengers are photographed and baggage carefully examined.

At one time, before the U.S. airlift began last December between Varadero Beach in Cuba and Miami, the flights served an important humanitarian purpose: They were the only way many refugees could leave Cuba.

Chain of Missions In Methodist Churches

Miss Ida M. Klingeberger, California, Mo., left for St. Louis on Oct. 21 to attend an orientation meeting with 48 other missionaries from various countries and the United States who participated in "The Chain of Missions" which was conducted throughout the Missouri East Conference from Oct. 22 until the 27th.

Nine bishops and one member from the Board of Missions from New York were also in this area for special services Sunday, Oct. 23. Rallies were held on Sunday afternoon in ten different centers in the conference. Six missionaries were assigned to each of the seven districts in the conference.

Miss Klingeberger was assigned with five other home and foreign missionaries, to the Kirksville district. On Sunday she participated in four services and the following days was guest speaker in churches in towns near by.

The purpose of "The Chain of Missions" was to reach as many people as possible in all of the churches in the conference with the missionary message, thus giving information as well as inspiration for enlarging the wide spread missionary program of the church in many parts of the world.

10 New Members To Missouri Squires Academy

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Judge Sam C. Blair of the Kansas City Court of Appeals and a Catholic nun, Sister M. Jacqueline Grennan of St. Louis, will be among 10 new members of the Missouri Academy of Squires.

The academy was set up in 1960 by the late Gov. James T. Blair, older brother of the judge —to recognize Missourians who did something extra for their nation, state or community.

Sister Jacqueline's citation was for "the energy, keen wit and warmth of heart that have led to her success as president of Webster College."

Judge Blair's citation called attention to "his distinguished service to the bench, the bar and the people of Missouri as jurist in the circuit and appellate courts of Missouri."

Others in the new class of squires who will be given their citations, lapel buttons and gold headed canes Nov. 18 include:

Thomas H. Eliot of St. Louis —"For his many contributions to higher education as an author, as a member of educational commissions, councils and associations and as chancellor of Washington University."

—"For his great usefulness in building agricultural programs in Missouri and the nation and for his outstanding leadership in farm organizations."

William F. James of Clayton —"For his dedication to the welfare of children through many activities at home and abroad and particularly for his founding of Boys Town of Missouri."

Lue C. Lozier of Moberly and Jefferson City — "For his career in public service as chief counsel of the state Highway Commission, commissioner of the Supreme Court, secretary of the Missouri New York World's Fair commission and other assignments."

Arthur Mag of Kansas City— "For his contributions as lawyer, philanthropist and civic leader that have resulted in his being called "One Of Kansas City's greatest attributes."

The Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert of St. Louis—"For dynamic leadership in improving the scope, quality and availability of church-related higher education in Missouri and for his influence in developing a high level of rapport among all segments of higher education." Father Reinert is president of St. Louis University.

Sidney Salomon Jr. of St. Louis — "For being a strong force in behalf of good government, civic development and desirable professional sports in his city and state."

Judge Clem F. Storckman of Jefferson City— "For his great usefulness to Missouri as an articulate and informed citizen, an eminent lawyer and as chief justice of the state Supreme Court."

Former British Chief Turns In Daughter

LONDON (AP) — Maj. Gen. Henry Alexander, former British chief of Ghana's defense staff, looked into his daughter's handbag and found drugs. He called the police.

Jane Alexander 23, appeared in court Thursday on a charge of possessing Indian hemp. The magistrate discharged her with a warning "not to go on with this."

Jane kissed her father after the court hearing.

"I've been silly," she said. "Daddy meant well and I love and admire him."

Reiterates Opposition To Lottery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Col. Daniel O. Omer, deputy director of Selective Service, reiterated today the agency's opposition to a draft lottery — a system Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara says would help eliminate deficiencies in the present procedure.

Omer, in an address prepared for a national conference on the draft, said Congress intended that the selection of draftees be made by judgment rather than lot.

Only Thursday, McNamara was quoted in an interview published in the Harvard Crimson as calling current draft methods unsuitable.

"We draft the oldest first," McNamara said. "It's never clear exactly at what age one will be subject to the draft. This makes very difficult the planning of one's life."

Saying every 19-year-old should be subjected to a draft lottery, McNamara proposed that in case ofdeferment , the name of the registrant would go back in the pool upon expiration of the deferred period.

Taking part in the opening session of a conference called by the American Veterans Committee, Omer said the idea of the lottery is to cure the inequity of deferment.

"If we exercise our judgment to defer a part of the group, and subject to a lottery only those who are left, we cannot even contend that we are equally fair to all, and we have destroyed the purpose of the lottery, which is to place upon everyone equal liability and availability for military service, with selection left to the chance of the draw," Omer said.

Discussing the system's philosophy, Omer said: "The burden of proof is always on the registrant who believes he should be deferred or exempted from military service."

Turning to the student deferment policy, Omer said: "We believe that, generally speaking, the national interest would be better served if men who are going to college could complete their education before being considered for military service."

Favor Changing Holiday Dates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce said today a poll of its members shows overwhelmingly support for changing the dates of some holidays so they will occur regularly and uniformly on Mondays. Such changes would create more three-day weekends.

The chamber said 85 per cent of those responding to a questionnaire favored the general idea of observing Memorial Day, Thanksgiving, Independence Day, Veteran's Day and Washington's Birthday on Mondays.

The questionnaire did not discuss changing the observance of Christmas or New Year's Day. It was returned by 9,964 businessmen, or about one-third of the members polled.

US Representative Loses His Deferment

CHICKASHA, Okla. (AP) — U.S.Rep . Jed Johnson Jr., 26, a Democrat, lost his draft exemption in the 1966 general election when he was defeated for re-election.

They Often Come Too Late

The fellow who once said that "punctuality is the thief of time, "certainly knew what he was talking about. All through life most persons have had it drummed into them to be punctual; the duty of a gentleman and the necessity of a business man.

Great things could be accomplished in business circles, community life and social pleasures, if everyone was punctual. But this attribute is like everything else that human beings somehow defy. You can't get mass cooperation on punctuality.

A business meeting is set for 3 o'clock; a dinner is announced for 6:30; a card party for 7:00; a motor trip, hunting or fishing trip for another hour. What happens? The punctual persons sit around waiting for the slow pokes who, late as usual, come rushing up all in a dither. These animated jumping jacks seem to be accomplishing more than the punctual ones who lose so much productive time waiting on the late arrivals.

Nothing is more provoking than to sit around waiting for the slow pokes. The majority practices the courtesy of punctuality. But the minority slow pokes have things "their way." I have seen as many as 100 guests, as many as 30 business men sit around awaiting arrival of three or four late comers. Things just can't start until they get there, it seems.

Late comers get grandstand attention, laugh off the jibes and relish being placed in a conspicious position. This attitude is noticed by persons who have always been punctual. So they, too, start the practice of being late. A group or community thus may be infected with the tardy germ.

Now if everyone could agree on being one hour tardy at every function, then all meetings could be scheduled one hour later. Thus everyone would be on time. A suggestion to work on these nippy, fall evenings reminiscent of the recent confusion when time schedules for meetings were so erratic during the recent season of DST and CST.

PRESIDENT PUSEY of HARVARD (In the Memphis Commercial Appeal): Students Must Respond. — College teachers can only hopefully aspire to show young people the way to learning and encourage them to develop for themselves a set of values for their lives.

But college also demands that the student meet it at least halfway. Some sort of response is wanted, other than diffidence, idleness,. . . or thoughtless rebellion. Faculty members are as shy of students as students are of them. The petulant complaint that college teachers are too busy to bother with students is only very partially true.

The experience of college comes to the individual at different levels; there are so many new impressions and ideas to be tested and not all students are ready to derive the fullest benefit from their exposure. Like the apples on the tree, some ripen before others and some few never ripen, even on a pleasant and sheltered hillside.

The presidential special train stopped at the Missouri Pacific depot for ten minutes allowing hundreds of Sedalians to see President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge who came out to stand on the rear platform and extend greetings to the throng. He also shook hands and conversed with Mayor J. L. Babcock and D. Kelly Scruton, Democrat reporter, who introduced the mayor to the president.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is launching a fire safety and research campaign in the wake of two recent aircraft carrier blazes which killed 52 men and injured 30.

Pentagon officers say they still aren't sure just what happened aboard the Oriskany and the Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"We're looking at all the possible ways we can think of that would give us better systems to reduce the scope of fires when they start," said one officer.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ambassador Robinson McIlvaine, who went to Guinea only several weeks ago, is returning for consultation. Relations between the two countries have become strained.

McIlvaine was put under house arrest for one day as an outgrowth of a squabble between Guinea and Ghana. Guinea held the United States responsible for Ghana's detention of a Guinean delegation which included the foreign minister. Ghana said it was retaliating for Guinean detention of Ghanaians.

Guinea has ordered 72 U.S. Peace Corps workers out of the country and has barred Pan American Airways from landing.

Getting Ready

I have enough, goodness knows,
I have three closets filled with clothes
But yet, when I start to dress
My bedroom just becomes a mess,
Dress after dress I try,
They just don't suit, I don't know why,
Somehow there's always something wrong,
The skirt's too short, or it's too long,
A button missing on a coat,
It's powder stained around the throat,
Or there's a spot right where it shows
And all around the room are clothes,
The hem is out, there is a rip,
Or it's too short for my clean slip,
And I resolve right then and there
That all my clothes I will repair
Knowing full well the next time none
Of those repair jobs will be done,
If it's a suit I search the house
To see if I can find a blouse,
The color and the kind I need,
And usually I don't succeed,
But when the blouse problem is solved
In other things I get involved,
Perfect will one stocking be
But there'll be runs in the next three
And when no mate for the one I find
I change to another kind,
I never get things quite complete,
The shoes to match will hurt my feet,
I try this hat and then that
Before I decide upon a hat,
I change to a purse or so
Before I'm really set to go,
And then, at last I'm on my way
There's always something spoils my day
Something to make me feel much worse
My lipstick's in another purse,
How did women get dressed years ago
I simply will never know,
Wtih high laced shoes and corset strings,
And curling irons and all those things
And yet, I guess they were in luck
They had no zippers to get stuck,
That helpless feeling of distress
The victim of a half zipped dress.

When she goes into the house from work or wherever she has been the woman goes into the bedroom and just steps out of her shoes. Then when she gets ready to go again she goes in the bedroom and steps in them again, never using her hands or even bending down to put them on.

One day recently she was going to the hospital to visit a relative who was a patient there. She had to park her car some distance away and walk over to the hospital. Just as she was opening the hospital door she glanced down. That was more than she nad done when she stepped into her shoes. For it was only at the hospital door that she discovered she was wearing two left shoes.

"Didn't they hurt when you were walking?" someone asked.

"No," she said, "I had no idea until I noticed them as I was going in. Once I thought I would go back home and change. Then, I decided that since I was that far I'd just go on in. But the farther I went the funnier it got. So she had something to give patients she saw there a laugh." — H. L.

Stopping for the night the man went back to his trailer and turned on the gas light, but it was so dim he knew something must be wrong. The mantle probably needed changing, so he changed it. But the light was no brighter, so he changed the mantle again. Still the trailer was only dimly lighted, and this time he decided it must be the generator, but he could find nothing wrong with the generator either.

Puzzled he went back in the trailer. It was still dark. Then he automatically reached up, pulled off his glasses, and the trailer at once was bright with light. The only thing wrong was he was still wearing his dark glasses. All that work and worry just because he had on dark glasses. H. L.

Bulgarians Joke About China Claims

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — A group of laughing Bulgarians stood around a showcase in front of Red China's embassy, looking at photographs of "the practical application of Mao Tse-ung's teachings."

A girl pointed at the picture of a Chinese physicist said to have found four new sources of energy by studying Mao's works. Then she brought her forefinger up to the side of her head with a twisting movement highly uncomplimentary to the physicist.

The crowd burst into unresigned laughter, joined by the Bulgarian policeman on duty at the embassy gate.

From a window of the ornate embassy building a totally expressionless Chinese face looked out on the scene. The policeman glanced up at the window and the grin froze on his face.

Red China's "great cultural revolution" is considered a huge joke by ordinary Bulgarians, but at the official level it is no laughing matter.

One high official describes the Soviet-Chinese dispute as communism's gravest crisis since the Bolshevik revolution of 1917.

The same official, less than two years ago, brushed aside the dispute as "merely an ideological difference" which could never disrupt the solidarity of the world's two major Communist powers.

In the meantime, he says, the "great cultural revolution" has widened the breach beyond repair. He describes the Chinese Red Guard movement as a form of "racist fascism" directed against the white race and against China's own Communist party.

Another official compares the Red Guards with Hitler's storm troopers and says the destruction of China's cultural heritage is reminiscent of the Nazis' book burnings of the 1930s.

"Like Hitler, Mao has only one real objective — war," he adds.

At the recent Soviet bloc summit meeting in Moscow, most of the Soviet Union's allies agreed that a reconciliation with Red China's present leaders was inconceivable, informants report.

Only the hesitation of Rumania — and, surprisingly, Poland — kept this view out of the final communique issued in Moscow, the sources add.

In Bulgaria, generally regarded as the Soviet Union's unswerving ally, there is no hesitation. Western diplomats sense a grim new attitude here toward the "great cultural revolution" since the Moscow summit.

Some Bulgarian officials express a hope that China may "come to her senses" and eventually discard Mao and his heir-apparent, Lin Piao, to return to the Communist alliance.

Others are more pessimistic. They foresee an ever-growing conflict heightened by Chinese territorial claims in Siberia and Mongolia and the development of a nuclear striking force.

World News Capsule

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — President Sukarno sounded more like his old self today in a speech to new officers from the armed forces academy. It was his third major speech in a week and appeared to observers to reflect increasing confidence in his position.

Sukarno said Malaysia was still a neocolonialist project but Indonesia's armed might had settled the problem.

MOSCOW (AP) — A 106-carat diamond, the biggest in the history of the Soviet diamond industry, has been found in the eastern Siberian republic of Yakutsk, the Soviet news agency Tass said today. The world's largest diamond, the Cullinan, was found in 1905 in South Africa. It weighed 3,106 carats or about 1 1-3 pounds.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The hair of Austrian wigs for the U.S. market has become tangled in East-West politics.

The U.S. government ruled last August that wigs imported into America had to have a government certificate that they contained no hair from Red China or Communist North Viet Nam.

The Salzburg manufacturer of 90 per cent of Austria's wigs for export said he uses Italian and Indian hair, as manufacturers in West Germany and Italy do. The Austrian goevrnment, unlike the governments of Italy and West Germany, said it would not provide the necessary certificate.

OTTAWA (AP) — With his appropriations bill for November stalled in a parliamentary impasse, Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson announced unexpectedly Thursday night that his liberal government had discovered other funds to pay overdue salaries to thousands of federal employes and pay scores of government contractors.

Opposition Conservatives refuse to approve the $372-million appropriations bill until the Liberals agree to immediate committee hearings on their controversial plan to merge the three armed services. The Liberals said hearings would kill the merger.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Romney Win Gives Nixon Body Blow

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The biggest winner in Tuesday's election was Michigan's square-jawed Gov. George Romney whose brand of moderate Republicanism scored impressive victories across the country.

His political lieutenants wasted no time in attempting to harness the trend to Romney's presidential bandwagon. Even before the election, Romney forces were busy behind the scenes lining up support among moderates.

From Gov. Nelson Rockefeller in New York to Governor-elect Winthrop Rockefeller in Arkansas, from Senator-elect Edward Brooke in Massachusetts to Senator-elect Mark Hatfield in Oregon, most of Tuesday's top winners are known to favor Romney.

This must be a bitter blow to Richard Nixon, the perennial hopeful, who barnstormed up and down the country in behalf of GOP candidates in 65 Congressional Districts. He sought to win friends, influence future convention delegates, and put the Nixon stamp on the Republican victories.

Though Nixon earned the gratitude of the party pros, the post-election pundits are wrong in claiming the results boosted his presidential prospects.

This column has talked to GOP leaders in the big presidential swing states. Though it is too early for irrevocable pledges, most of the gubernatorial winners privately have expressed a preference for Romney.

The closest to a commitment has come from New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, who has promised that he will keep out of the presidential race himself and leave Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., free to seek the vice presidency. It is no secret that Javits is quietly lining up the massive New York delegation behind Romney.

Pennsylvania's Raymond Shafer, Massachusetts's John Volpe, Maryland's Ted Agnew, and Arknasas's Winthrop Rockefeller have also been in touch with the Romney forces.

Mormons Would Back Romney

Ohio's Gov. James Rhodes is the only major winner who might be leaning toward Nixon. But Rhodes isn't expected to hand over the Ohio delegation as long as there's the slightest possibility he might become a dark horse candidate himself.

California's Ronald Reagan is also likely to go into the convention as a dark horse. If he should be left at the starting gate, he wouldn't be eager to throw his support to Nixon, who has lost many friends in California since he left the state in an angry pout over losing the Governorship.

Reagan also drew a big vote from the Mormons who constitute a powerful conservative bulwark in Southern California. Out of pure pride, they could be expected to support their fellow Mormon, George Romney, for president.

In conservative Utah, for example, a secret poll taken by Merrill-Wirthlin associates showed the State's predominantly Mormon voters would give Romney an overwhelming 66 to 24 per cent majority over President Johnson. Nixon has no such support in Mormon country.

The big Senate victories also went to such Romney-minded Republicans as Illinois's Charles Percy, Oregon's Mark Hatfield, Massachusetts's Edward Brooke, New Jersey's Clifford Case, Tennessee's Howard Baker, Kentucky's John Sherman Cooper, and Maine's Margaret Chase Smith.

Even the conservatives who won—Texas's John Tower, Nebraska's Carl Curtis, South Dakota's Karl Mundt and Iowa's Jack Miller — campaigned as moderates.

This almost certainly will have a moderating influence upon that old political chameleon, Senate GOP leader Everett Dirksen, who can be expected to strike a pose closer to the middle of the road during the next two years.

Most of Tuesday's Republican winners, with the glaring exception of Ronald Reagan, were political stalwarts who put their convictions on the line and campaigned on the issues. The political hucksters, who relied upon slogans and simplicities, generally lost — which suggests that the American people aren't easily fooled.

Rooney's Economy

It looks as if Mrs. Arthur Goldberg, wife of our efficient U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, would not have to ask the American U.N. Staff to bake cookies when Ambassador Goldberg entertains other diplomats.

Rep. John Rooney, the Brooklyn Democrat who rides herd on State Department appropriations, has so drastically cut appropriations for the American staff at the United Nations that Mrs. Goldberg had to appeal for help from wives of the staff when it came to entertainment.

Now, however, Farnsworth's Cookies of Cuba, N.Y., having learned of the plight of the American staff to the United Nations, has come forward with an offer to contribute "all the cookies you may need for any future U. N. Tea Party."

Wrote Frances Fox, Vice President of Farnsworth's cookies, to Mrs. Goldberg: "Simply let us know what varieties you would like, and we shall be delighted to ship them to you without obligation."

Congratulations to Farnsworth's cookies.

Note: Perhaps other patriotic citizens could help the Supreme Court put up glass showcases in its lower lobby to exhibit the famous decision of Marbury vs. Madison, the Dred Scott Decision, the Schecter Sick Chicken Decision, and other famous Supreme Court cases which have made American History. The Justices have been trying for six years to get a few thousand dollars to set up these exhibit cases, but Chairman Rooney of Brooklyn says no.

Duplicate Expert Adds One Trick

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

In a match point duplicate game the chances are that every South player of today's hand will get to three no-trump and go after the diamond suit by playing the king and then leading toward dummy for a finesse. West would show out and eventually declarer would go down one or two tricks depending on whether or not he would try the club finesse.

	NORTH 12 ♠ A 6 2 ♥ K 6 ♦ A J 5 4 3 ♣ 8 5 4
WEST ♠ J 3 ♥ Q J 10 8 2 ♦ 8 ♣ K J 9 7 2		EAST ♠ Q 10 9 7 ♥ 7 5 4 ♦ Q 10 7 6 ♣ 10 6
	SOUTH (D) ♠ K 8 5 4 ♥ A 9 3 ♦ K 9 2 ♣ A Q 3

Both vulnerable

West	North	East	South
			1 N.T.
Pass	3 N.T.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead—♥ Q

The average rubber bridge player would probably go down but an expert duplicate game would probably make four no-trump.

He would win the first heart in his own hand, lead a diamond to dummy's ace and a second diamond back toward his king-nine. He would plan to rise with the king in the event that East showed out or played the queen or ten. Assuming East did play low expert South would play his nine. Then he would cash his king; return to dummy with the ace of spades and give East his queen of diamonds.

This line of play would guarantee four diamond tricks against anything except a 5-0 diamond break. Four diamonds plus two spades, two hearts and a club adds to nine tricks.

How would expert South make an overtrick? East would probably lead a second heart when he got in with the queen of diamonds. South would have discarded a spade on the fourth diamond. He would discard another spade on the fifth. He then would cash his ace of spades and be left with the nine of hearts and ace-queen-small of clubs. Assuming West had held two clubs, South just might end play him by leading the nine of hearts.

'Worst Is Yet To Come' In Florence

FLORENCE (AP) — Standing in a food line, a Florentine looked at the others waiting with him and said:

"The worst is yet to come. The hunger, the real misery will start at the end of the month, when no paycheck comes in for most people and we begin to feel the cold."

As Giulio Ceva-Grimaldi, 40, waited for his evening package of vegetables, bread and tinned meat, a chill wind swept Florence's Piazzo Vecchio.

In Italy's mountainous northeast, snow and rain already hampered rescue workers trying to reach villages still isolated by the disastrous floods and landslides eight days ago and more stormy weather was reported today.

Ceva-Grimaldi and his wife, Giuliana, who lost everything when the floods hit, shared an orange for breakfast this morning and ate soup for lunch at one of the public kitchens set up by the Florence City Council.

"We're lucky we have no children to see and feel this," said Ceva-Grimaldi, a dealer in second-hand items whose ground floor shop and apartment were ruined when the flood waters surged almost to second-floor windows.

He and his wife have been living since in a boarding house, on credit. He pulled 600 lire (96 cents) from his pocket and said that was all he had left.

The floods came a few days after employes got their October paychecks. Those whose places of work were wiped out cannot count on another check for a long time.

Two thirds of this city of 450,000 was stricken by the flood and the sea of oil-coated mud it left behind. About 150,000 lost their homes and an estimated 200 persons were killed.

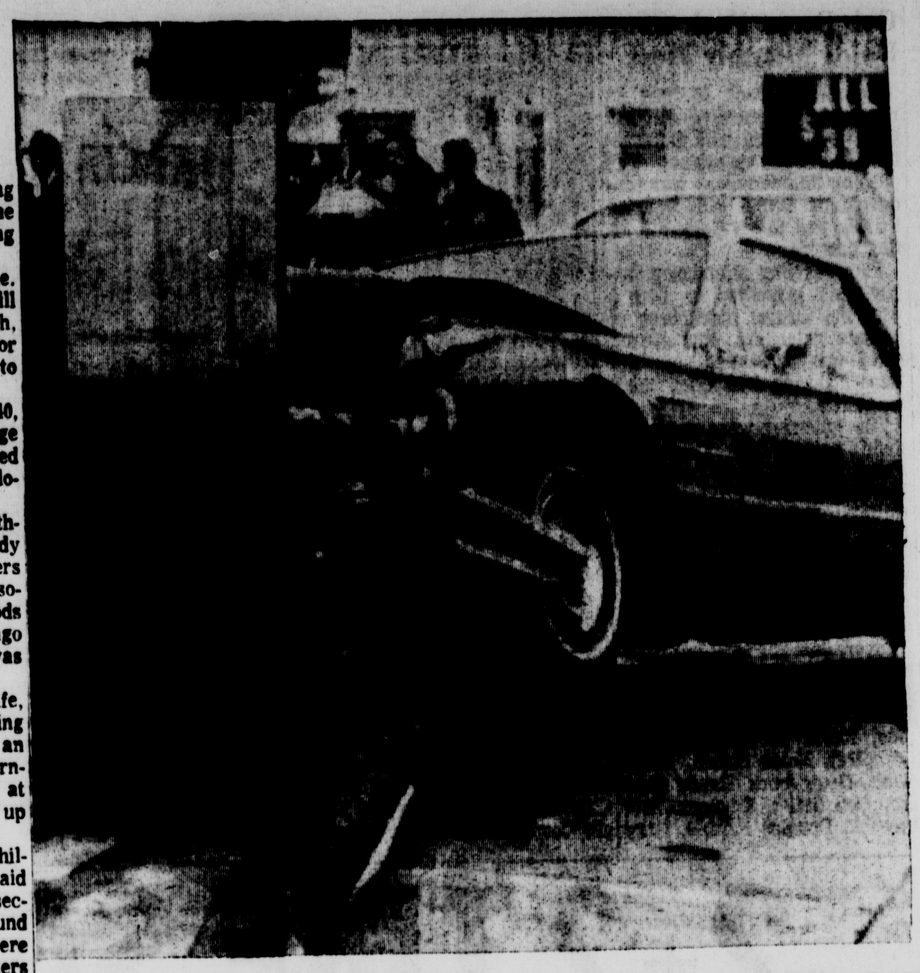
The flood also wreaked incalculable and irreparable damage to Florence's art treasures.

Elsewhere, rain pelted much of the peninsula, causing some cases of new flooding. Whistling winds and high tides hit sea coasts from Sicily to the northern Adriatic.

Authorities ordered evacuation of several villages near dikes whose stability was in doubt.

Fog hung over the Alpine province of Belluno, and the Florentina torrent flooded lowlying sections of the town of Caprile, with 500 inhabitants.

A tributary of the Arno River rose menacingly after six hours of rain, causing fears of another flood in Montevarchi, a city of 11,000 inhabitants south of Florence.



INDIANAPOLIS — A late model car rests against a utility pole here after the driver, Napoleon H. Hillard, Indianapolis, lost control of the vehicle and knocked down one of two poles at the intersection. Hillard, 46, collapsed and died, apparently of a heart attack, moments after the crash. (UPI)

Minutemen Continued Till Monday

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The trial of three Minutemen has been recesssed until Monday so one of the defendants can bring four witnesses from California.

Judge Elmo B. Hunter, in U.S. District Court, reluctantly granted the recess Friday after pointing out that the date of the trial was set two months ago and everybody should have been fully prepared.

On trial are Robert Bolivar DePugh of Norborne, Mo., founder of the underground Minutemen organization; Troy Houghton of San Diego, Calif., West Coast coordinator of the group, and Walter Patrick Peyson, Norborne. they are charged with violating the federal firearms act. The trial started last Monday.

Houghton asked for the delay. Judge Hunter questioned him closely about tardiness of the witnesses. Houghton said he had no money for transportation expenses. He said the witnesses are Kenneth Stanley Waite, Mrs. Leona Minick. Mrs. Fran Taber and Frank Williams.

DePugh told the judge he had expected to have a weekend to bring in witnesses and that he felt he wouldn't have a fair trial if he couldn't "confer at length with my attorneys."

"I noted in the newspaper where you have been traveling about the country," Judge Hunter said. "You could have used that time to confer with your attorneys. I feel that any further delay would be adverse to your interest."

The judge then granted the recess "but only on the stipulation that I'll allow only the four witnesses asked by Mr. Houghton."

Defense witnesses who testified Friday said they hadn't seen automatic weapons or gun silencers demonstrated at minutement training sessions.

Dennis Mower, 21, of Lancaster, Calif., who said he was a theology student, said he bought a deactivated Thompson submachine gun from a man in Hollywood for $100 and took it to a Minutemen training session in Independence, Mo.

Mower said Houghton, whom he had known for years, explained the operation of the machine gun to those at the meeting.

Other defense witnesses were Houghton's wife, Betty; Frederick W. Hawes, 56, of Pomona, Calif., a retired naval officer, and David M. Agin, 35, Kansas City. All said they had seen no automatic weapons in the defendants' possession.

Two Traffic Deaths In Kansas City

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two persons were killed in separate traffic accidents on Kansas City's east side Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Helen Lasley, about 75, was killed by a car as she tried to walk across the Southeast Freeway at 18th street during the rush hour.

Police quoted witnesses as saying the driver, Mrs. Opal A. Nelson, 45, had no chance to stop or avoid hitting the woman.

Dupree Atlee Holman Jr., 45, fell to his death from atop the cab of a trash truck driven by his brother-in-law, Joseph McShan. Police said Holman was lying on the cab and fell off on a turn.

The accidents brought Kansas City's traffic toll to 90 deaths for the year, compared to 46 at the same date last year.

Car's Driver Dies

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — The driver was killed and a passenger was injured severely Friday night in a car that hit a culvert on Missouri 32 at the south edge of Eldorado Springs.

Killed was Raymond Chalmers Hutchison, 59. John W. Campbell Jr. suffered a head injury and was taken to Burge Hospital in Springfield. Both live near Eldorado Springs.

Officers said the car swerved off the pavement and traveled 150 feet before it hit the concrete culvert.

Congressmen Average Out Middle-Aged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pick a new congressman-elect, any new congressman-elect, and the chances are you will be looking at a middle-aged lawyer, married and a joiner of organizations.

That's the statistical average of the 59 Republicans and 14 Democrats who will start House service in January — or resume it after an interruption.

But the 73 new faces show plenty of variety when looked at individually.

The Republicans, for example, have an Alaska homesteader, Rep.-elect Howard W. Pollock, who now practices law but relaxes by pursuing octopus and a big game. Another new GOP member is former Olympic decathlon champion Robert Bruce Mathias of California, who now operates a boys' camp.

Among the incoming Democrats is a former newspaper publisher, David Pryor of Arkansas, who switched private careers after starting his public one. Pryor went to law school while serving in the state legislature and was a practicing attorney when he was elected to Congress.

Another two-career Democrat is Peter Kyros of Maine, an Annapolis graduate who switched to law after 10 years' naval service.

The age of the newcomers averages out a bit under 44. The Republicans run slightly older, while the Democratic average is 41. But the Republicans have the youngest member, as well as the oldest — William A. Steiger of Wisconsin, 28, and William Henry Harrison of Wyoming, 70, who is resuming a congressional career that began in 1951 and was twice interrupted.

The class of 1967 is no exception to the rule that the law is the preferred route to public office in the United States.

Of the 73 new members, 30 are attorneys, including 10 of the 14 Democrats. Businessmen make up the next largest category, 17, and there are nine farmers, including several businessmen who list themselves also as farmers.

The new class also offers four bankers, two college professors, an ordained clergyman, a retired state police officer, a nurseryman and an editor.

Almost all are married, but Rep.-elect G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery, D-Miss., not only is a bachelor at 47 but is described as much in demand as an escort for distinguished visiting ladies at official functions in his state.

One Man Killed As Car Hits Culvert

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — Raymond Chalmers Hutchinson, 59, was killed Friday night as his car left the pavement and hit a culvert at the south edge of Eldorado Springs on Missouri 32.

His passenger, John W. Campbell Jr. suffered a severe head injury and was taken to Burge Hospital in Springfield. Both men's homes are near Eldorado Springs.

Two Husbands' Similar Deaths Painful Irony

MEADVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Her first husband was killed in Viet Nam. She remarried, and her second husband was killed in Viet Nam.

She gave birth to two sons — one fathered by the first husband, the other by the second. Neither father lived to see his child.

Mrs. Bernard Kistler, 26, was informed of the death of her second husband only an hour after she gave birth to his son.

Today, Mrs. Kistler was coming out of the shock of the double tragedy in Meadville City Hospital.

Her first husband, Army Lt. William T. Reach of Ormond, Fla., was killed 22 months ago on a Viet Nam battlefield.

Mrs. Kistler was informed Thursday her second husband, also an Army lieutenant, had been killed in a Viet Cong attack.

Doctors said she lapsed into a severe shock when she heard of his death.

Today, a hospital spokesman said, "She's getting along as well as you could expect under the circumstances." She received visitors Friday.

The spokesman said the baby — still unnamed — was "doing real good."

Both of her husbands were graduates of West Point.

Youth Week Set For November

The week of November 14-20 has been set aside for observance of Optimist International's Youth Appreciation Week. The objective of this observance is to recognize and applaud the overwhelming majority of teenagers who believe in and practice decency, not deliquency.

Annual observance of Youth Appreciation Week was instituted ten years ago by Optimist International, a men's service organization with 87,000 members in 2,500 clubs throughout the United States and Canada, to counterbalance the publicity and attention given to the small percentage of young people who flaunt the law. Well-known by their slogan, "Friend of the Boy", Optimists have been lending a helping hand to youth since their organization was founded 48 years ago.

In observance of Youth Appreciation Week this year, the Knob Noster Optimist Club will select a boy, age 13-19, from the local area to receive a youth appreciation trophy at the annual football banquet on Nov. 22. In order to select a boy for the Youth Appreciation Award, the Optimist Boys Work Chairman asks that adults in the Knob Noster-Whiteman AFB area send a letter of nomination to him stating why they feel a partcular boy deserves winning the award. It is suggested that the letter include the boy's name, address, date of birth, and phone number. The boy must be between the ages of 13-19 (as of November 22). Also, he must be able to attend the football banquet on Nov. 22, 1966. The nomination must include a statement of the achievements of the boy since Nov. 20, 1965. Suggested achievement areas are: Youth-in-government, youth-in-religion, youth-in-education, patriotism, farm youth, outstanding awards received, youth-in-business, and youth-in-community projects.

Please send your letters to the Optimist Boys Work Chairman: Capt. Jerald L. Hinton, 207 Sunset Blvd., Knob Noster, Mo. The letters must arrive not later than 12 noon Monday, Nov. 14, 1966.

How Good Are Our Schools?

The U.S. Commissioner of Education fills out a "report card" that every parent should read

By HAROLD HOWE II
U. S. Commissioner of Education as told to THEODORE IRWIN

WHEN I MEET parents, the question I am most often asked is: "Do our kids really get a good education?"

How good are America's schools? Would I give them an "A" or a "C-minus" or perhaps some other grade?

Actually, to try to rate U.S. education would not make a great deal of sense because we do not have a single centralized system of education. Instead, we have a diversity of schools whose quality is determined by local decisions.

As for comparing today's schools with those of 30 to 40 years ago, a complicating factor is the presence, especially in our high schools, of a greater proportion than ever of children handicapped by disadvantaged backgrounds. Still, I would say that the United States probably has as good a system of education as any country.

The fact that such a high proportion of our deprived children attend school is one evidence that American education is doing a better job than in the past.

Weighing the Criticism

It is possible, of course, to point to certain weaknesses in our schools. It is clear that they are not fully meeting individual needs and the demands of our economy. We see this in the fact that, while many individuals are unemployed, there are still many unfilled jobs because persons trained to fill them are not available.

In this disparity, education obviously has failed. It has failed to keep abreast of fundamental changes in our society. It seems to me we have a real task ahead of us to find successful ways of dealing with youths who simply do not respond to schools as they are now operated.

A major shortcoming is the persistent problem of keeping learning up-to-date. Only 10 years ago the typical chemistry, physics, or biology course in a U.S. high school could have been taught in the year 1900.

In this 10-year period, many attempts have been made to up-date curricula and retrain teachers. While a clear improvement is evident, the process takes time. There still are large areas of the country where the revolution in science teaching has not as yet had much effect.

I believe this also has happened in mathematics, English, and social studies. In math, the Office of Education is now supporting a major study comparing pupils' learning in different countries. While those conducting the study are not yet prepared to report in detail, it looks as if the United States is not on top of the heap. In some other nations, learning in math seems to be more productive than it is here.

Our schools also have been called remiss in another area: spelling. I must confess, however, that I can't get too excited about the inability of some people to spell accurately. Spelling often seems to be an art beyond the reach of otherwise reasonably normal people. I am one of them, and I am fairly comfortable with this lack of skill.

To be sure, we ought to be striving for better self-expression and for reasonable accuracy in spelling. But we could turn out a lot of graduates who can spell splendidly but are unable to put the words together. If one had to choose between the two skills, I would place more emphasis on what words mean.

Often schools are criticized for their "frills." I get up in arms when I find the arts and music placed in this category. These seem to me among mankind's most civilized creations. To term them nonessential is really an uncivilized attitude.

At the other end of the so-called "frill" spectrum is driver training. I hold no strong views about teaching students to drive, except that our society has a weapon called the automobile which people have to be taught to use carefully. Since nobody else is teaching it thoroughly, maybe the schools had better do so.

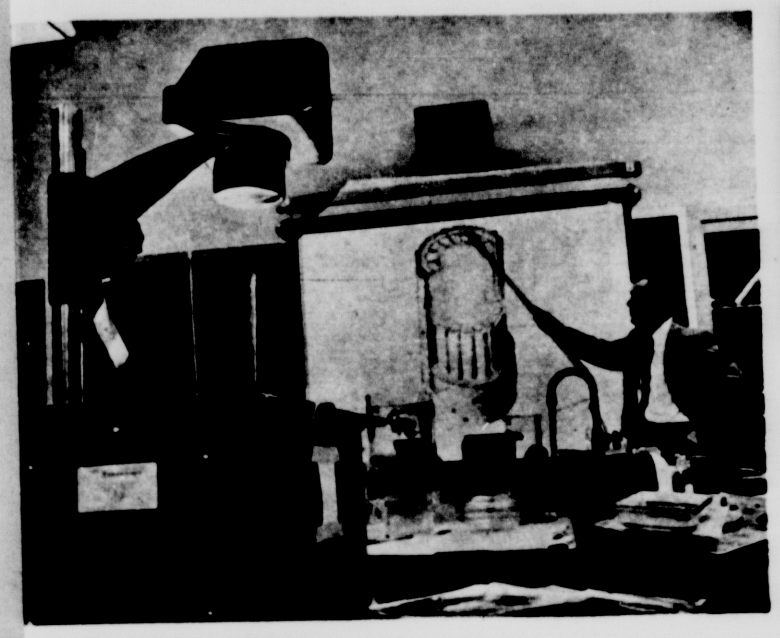
Some of the weaknesses of our schools lie in their organization. Throughout the nation, they are organized around a system of 12 successive grades, and children are promoted in much the same way everywhere. We tend to confront the student with the problem of having to move ahead at a pace that is not necessarily his but rather his class as a whole.

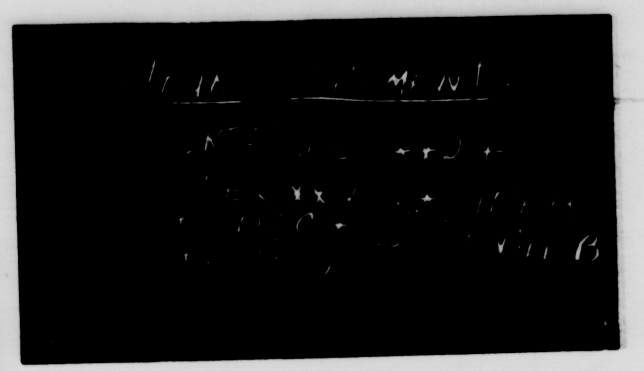
Our schools have many strengths. We are clearly providing more education to a larger proportion of our people with every passing year. Larger percentages of each age group are finishing high school, entering college, and completing advanced work.

I think the quality of teaching has been improving. Our teacher-training institutions have been changing more rapidly than at any period in the past 20 or 30 years. And a re-emphasis of significant learning and knowledge is beginning to have its impact on the children.

A Look at the Plus Side

I could list scores of important advances. One interesting concept, on the scene for several years, is team teaching, which utilizes the spe-





Machines have come to the classroom. Individual ones (far left) are used to personalize learning. Others, such as the overhead projectors (above and left), simplify instruction for teachers. The formula (upper right) may puzzle parents—but it's readily understood by students (right) who use computers regularly.

A Distinguished Background in Education

Harold Howe II, the U. S. Commissioner of Education, has been a teacher, principal, and superintendent at some of the finest public and private schools in the East. For two years prior to his appointment as Commissioner in 1965, he served as executive director of the Learning Institute of North Carolina, which encourages serious educational research and innovation.

cial talents of teachers and permits individual aid for both "slow" and talented pupils. This idea offers a pattern for loosening up the organization of our schools to serve learning better.

A far-reaching innovation, the nongraded school, deserves greater exploration than it has had. This is simply a device for saying: let's not move this pupil every year into a new grade; let him flow along through school at his own rate of learning. That is the kind of thinking to which educators should give more attention.

Equally exciting is computerized instruction. We have gone through the first generation of teaching machines, and during this period many were bought by schools because they were shiny and the "in" thing to do. Now we are becoming more sophisticated about teaching machines, realizing that the apparatus in itself does not prove anything but that you must first have really good programs to feed into it.

In any case, the computer presents the possibility of storing a great deal of information on magnetic tape which the student can call upon as he needs it. Depending on his responses, the computer can determine what information bears on the problem at hand and provide facts which build on knowledge the student already has.

I see a strong connection between computerized instruction and the nongraded school idea. The computer, and teaching through it, is a way of individualizing the teaching process. And individualized instruction is needed throughout our educational system.

Ideally each student should have his own personal "track." The computer and other, newer educational media offer this wonderful opportunity. They can bring the best teachers, the most carefully planned curricula, and key books to each classroom and to each pupil.

They can free a teacher from the slavery of information-giving and make him more of a counselor, a diagnostician, a motivator, and a critic and analyst of information—functions no machine can perform. Thus the machine will make the teacher more, rather than less, important.

How to Rate Your Schools

Parents inevitably ask me: "How can we rate the schools in our town? How can we tell whether we're getting enough for our school dollars?"

One useful element to look at is the per-pupil expenditure. Across the country, this ranges from less than $300 a year to more than $1,500. In all likelihood, if your community is spending much less than another community, it needs to provide more facilities and higher teachers' salaries.

Also, see if your educational system offers such services as counseling, remedial instruction, and school libraries. Determine whether the schools meet the particular needs of the various groups of children in the community. For instance, a fortunate suburb may be doing a very good job for the 80 percent of its youngsters headed for college while neglecting—by failing to provide special programs—the 20 percent who are not.

Certainly a school should not be judged on the basis of how many merit scholarship winners it produces or how many graduates get into Ivy League colleges. An excellent school I know of in the Midwest does not send any students at all to Ivy League colleges, but it does as much as any school in the nation to turn out good citizens in terms of their values and attitudes.

Basically, to improve their schools, parents should see that first-rate persons are chosen for the school board. The most significant role of any board is to select the school superintendent and to back him up, doing everything it can to develop effective and forward-looking policy procedures within which he operates.

Unfortunately school boards have a tendency to become so interested in small administrative details that they invade the proper province of the administration, especially in picking teachers and principals.

Some parents have found that they can help improve their schools by organizing or joining study groups. I have great faith in the democratic process. When citizens are really well informed about their schools' activities, they usually have constructive and useful recommendations to make.

A parents' "pressure group," on the other hand, can be a self-appointed body which decides it has the answer to some problem—for example, how English should be taught. This kind of usurpation of the professional's role can become a very limiting factor in teaching.

At home, I do not think parents should take as gospel everything their children tell them about teachers—nor for that matter should teachers believe everything they are told about parents. You are certainly not apt to find out, solely from your own child, whether he's receiving a "good education."

On the national scale, we have asserted in the past that all children should be educated. Now we say that all should be educated well.

The fact that education is locally controlled gives communities the right to have schools which range the full spectrum of quality—or the lack of it.

I see plenty of evidence that many local communities, aided by state and federal funds, are improving their schools. I hope such signs of improvement have reached your community. ◆

Letter to a Canine Friend

By MacKINLAY KANTOR

Pulitzer Prize winner for "Andersonville"; also author of "Spirit Lake," "The Voice of Bugle Ann," "Cuba Libre," "Lobo," "Turkey in the Straw," etc.

Miss Canella Bales
c/o Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bales
10806 Lindbrook Drive
Los Angeles, Calif. 90024

Dear Canella:

It was thoughtful of you to send a Christmas card to our own Bill Dog. Trouble is, I've been unable to give it to him because he is no longer living here.

Bill has gone very far away.

I don't even know his address and can't forward any mail to him. But doubt not that we treasure every memory of your visit here. You, très charmant in pearl collar and blue hair ribbons, as befitting any toy poodle of femininity and station—and Bill Dog, all brindles and uplifted ears and sharply wagging tail, a bucolic mixed breed full of snorts and sneezes but bound to welcome every guest as if that guest were the gift of God.

Now this business about Bill Dog going away—it sounds rather as if it were something he did deliberately, perhaps even in naughtiness or, save the mark, in malice. Yet that is untrue: it is a retreat in which every Dog indulges eventually, and we HBs (Human Beings) have never become accustomed to the idea.

People go into fits over Abandonment by Dogs. Some of them refuse to talk about it, some threaten to jump out of a window, some lock themselves in their rooms to weep. All and sundry act as if they were enduring a phenomenon unparalleled in the experience of other HBs.

Of course, you and I know the falsehood of such an idea. But still it is difficult for many persons to adjust themselves to the actuality.

Come to think of it, this is just about the only heartbreaking thing that a Dog ever does to an HB. People do dreadful things to people; they did yesterday, are doing so today, will do so tomorrow. Dogs couldn't possibly behave as wickedly as people! They work only this final little cruelty on the heart because they can't avoid doing so.

That does seem like a very sad state of affairs—to have Dogs giving any pain at all—but it must be so. (This circumstance should be corrected in some future environment where a great many other reforms are crying to be made.)

Canella, do you know what some silly folks do when such a thing happens? They beat their breasts and cry against the Lord and the stars. They yell loudly, "I will never have another Dog."

Can you imagine anything really so absurd?

It is like saying: "I owned a supreme friend. He gave me laughter, courage, tenderness, power. He gave me all those things, and more—yet now he is gone. Therefore, I want never to have another friend."

There is some sort of distorted inverse reasoning here which I can't follow. It seems much like sitting on the beach at the bliss of sunrise (as I am sitting just now, with gulls calling and flying for their breakfasts over the satin Gulf) and declaring: "I find wistfulness and mystery and medicine in this day. So I decline to see another day. I never want to live again."

Or—shall we mention love? Suppose one says to a lover: "We formed an almost unbelievable union. We were sustained and invigorated. We dwelt in a perfect amalgamation of our mutual flesh and spirit. We strode the clouds with all of Beethoven resounding around us, with all of Michelangelo hung upon our wall. The very tapestries of Heaven came floating to wrap us when we wearied. We owned such a pride and such an undiminishing treasury. Ergo—what is the verdict? We desire never to make love again."

. . . The apple was delicious, so I don't want to eat another apple.

There's no profit, Canella, in detailing any further lunacies.

Irene and I have to get ready to go on a little trip ourselves, but this is one from which we hope to return. We'll come back to the house where last you visited us and where Bill Dog's collar is hung in reverence and in style and where a few of his hairs may still be discovered here and there. Were you present, you would find his jovial scent, I know.

But, fact is, it will be replaced when we return from our trip. Funny thing: we know that it will be replaced, but by whom, we can't yet tell. We can't even describe him physically . . . still we know he will be with us soon.

Because there is no proper answer to the Departure of a Dog except the Advent of Another Dog. . . . You Dogs have brought this about cleverly, all by yourselves, without any help from us. So we are in your debt.

Canella, please visit us again before too long. We will wish you to meet the new Dog who is coming—no, of course not; not to replace Bill! No Dog can ever replace another.

But one Dog can take over the responsibilities and duties of another, and I'm glad to say that somewhere they are doing so every hour. Dogs always have a keen sense of fitness and propriety.

Our best HB love to you, Canella, and to Peggy and Bob.

Affectionately,

MacKinlay Kantor.

Bringing Up Baby®

Hints Collected
by Mrs. Dan Gerber, Mother of Five

INTRODUCTORY IDEAS FOR YOUR BABY

When should you introduce a new food to your baby? Hard to say, exactly. Little ones vary as to when they are most receptive to new foods. For the most part, however, a new food should be introduced when baby is reasonably hungry but not necessarily at the beginning of a meal. Some babies take more readily to a new food after the first hunger pangs have been satisfied with formula or a bit of favorite food. By experimenting, you'll soon find out, which time your cherub prefers.

New! Butterscotch Pudding... a flavor favorite translated in taste terms to delight babies, toddlers and even mothers. Nourishing note: egg yolks and whole milk solids go into this pleasing dessert.

New! Gerber Peach Cobbler... a bang-up dessert with the full-blown flavor of fresh-as-you-please peaches, sparked with a tracery of cinnamon. Nutrition addition: it's vitamin-C enriched.

Fruit Pies for the Holidays

Prune Chiffon Pie, dark and dramatic, is a pleasant finale to any holiday meal.

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

■ To add excitement to your holiday dessert buffet, serve all three of these delightfully different fruit pies (cut in slim wedges, of course) accompanied by cups of steaming hot black coffee.

Prune Chiffon Pie

Pastry for a 1-crust 9-in. pie (your favorite recipe or a mix)
1 cup chopped plumped prunes*
⅓ cup bottled prune juice
2 tablespoons grated orange peel
3 eggs
½ cup packed light brown sugar
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup dairy sour cream
½ cup chilled heavy cream, whipped

1. Prepare pastry (see note for decorative edge). Bake and cool.

2. Mix chopped prunes, prune juice, and peel in a heavy saucepan.

3. Beat eggs; add a mixture of the next four ingredients and beat well. Mix in the sour cream, then stir into the prune mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium heat about 10 min., or until thickened. Cool the mixture to lukewarm.

4. Fold whipped cream into prune mixture. Turn filling into pie shell. Chill the pie until firm, about 4 hrs.

5. Just before serving, force sweetened whipped cream, meringue, or whipped dessert topping through pastry bag and star decorating tube to form a border of rosettes on pie. One 9-in. pie

Note: For decorative edge as in photo, trim pastry even with rim, moisten pastry with water, and overlap small leaf-shaped pastry cutouts around edge.

*To plump—Put dried prunes into colander and set over boiling water 30 min. until well-plumped.

Cranberry Lattice Pie

¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons water
4 cups (1 lb.) cranberries
2 tablespoons cold water
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2½ tablespoons butter or margarine
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
Pastry for 2-crust 9-in. pie (your favorite recipe or a mix)
Melted butter or margarine

1. Mix first four ingredients in a saucepan. Stir over medium heat until sugar is dissolved. Bring to boiling; add cranberries. Cook slowly 3 to 4 min., or just until skins of cranberries begin to pop.

2. Blend water and cornstarch. Gradually add to hot cranberries, stirring constantly. Bring rapidly to boiling, continuing to stir; cook 3 min. Remove from heat. Blend in butter or margarine and lemon and orange peel. Set aside to cool.

3. Prepare pastry, divide into halves, and shape into two balls. Roll out one ball into a round about 1 in. larger than over-all size of pie pan; fit gently into pan. Roll second ball into a rectangle about ⅛ in. thick and at least 10 in. long. Cut pastry with a sharp knife or pastry wheel into strips ½ in. wide; set aside.

4. When filling is cool, brush pastry shell with melted butter or margarine. Pour filling into shell. Arrange pastry strips, twisting slightly if desired, to form a lattice design over filling. Trim the strips even with the edge of the pastry; moisten with water. Fold pastry over ends of strips and flute edge.

5. Bake at 450°F. 10 min. Reduce heat to 350°F. and bake about 20 min. longer, or until pastry is lightly browned. One 9-in. pie

Persimmon Whipped-Cream Pie

Pastry for 1-crust 10-in. pie (your favorite recipe or a mix)
½ cup cold water
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
6 to 8 ripe persimmons
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup chilled heavy cream
⅓ cup sifted confectioners' sugar

1. Prepare pastry shell, bake, and set aside to cool on wire rack.

2. Soften gelatin in cold water in a small saucepan. Stir over low heat until gelatin is dissolved.

3. Meanwhile, rinse persimmons, remove peel, and cut into pieces; force enough persimmons through a sieve or food mill to yield 4 cups pulp. Stir the dissolved gelatin and mix into the pulp; blend in the lemon juice and salt.

4. Chill until mixture begins to gel (becomes slightly thicker); stir occasionally during chilling.

5. Whip cream until soft peaks are formed when beater is slowly lifted upright; beat in confectioners' sugar with final few strokes until blended. Spread over persimmon mixture and fold together. Turn filling into pastry shell and swirl top using back of a spoon. Chill until firm. One 10-in. pie

Hollywood's Most Glamorous Sisters

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

NATALIE AND LANA WOOD, Hollywood's two most glamorous sisters, are competitive enough to be bitter enemies. But somehow both manage to get along together marvelously well.

This is doubly amazing because of the wide difference in their acting careers. Natalie, now 28, is among Hollywood's golden circle of stars, who can demand and get more than half a million dollars per picture, as she did for her latest, MGM's "Penelope."

Lana, who is 20, makes less than $1,000 a week—a lot of money for girls outside Hollywood but not much when you support an agent, business manager, exclusive apartment, dog, two cats, and a $7,000 convertible. She has appeared as a walk-on in a number of her sister's pictures and now is a regular in ABC-TV's "Peyton Place."

Despite these career differences, the Wood girls remain genuinely fond of each other—thanks, in part, to the efforts of their mother. Mrs. Nicholas Gurdin told me recently: "My husband and I have tried to show no preference between the girls."

Nevertheless, Mrs. Gurdin had to admit that for years Natalie received preferential treatment. "I raised Natalie to be a movie star. To do it, I neglected my other children, patched my dresses to buy Natalie new wardrobes, and for a decade and a half entirely subordinated my life to her."

In fairness to Mrs. Gurdin, it must be pointed out that once Natalie was firmly established and Lana decided to follow her sister's footsteps, she made the same determined effort on behalf of her youngest daughter.

But her influence with Lana, whom she named after her favorite star, Lana Turner, was never so strong as with Natalie. "Even today when Lana has a problem, she won't call me," Mrs. Gurdin says. "She'll call Natalie."

As an actress, Natalie has received both high acclaim and severe panning. She recently won the dubious honor of being named the "Worst Actress of Last Year, This Year, and Next Year" by Harvard's Lampoon. Fortunately such jibes have not hurt her popularity, particularly with younger audiences, and her future is assured.

One of the three directors who guides Lana through her weekly chores in "Peyton Place" told me: "Lana is a hard worker, and this is on the plus side. Her talent is limited, but I think if she is properly handled, she may do all right in this business."

Lana is more reticent when talking about her private life than Natalie. If Natalie doesn't feel like discussing her unsuccessful marriage to Bob Wagner or her romances with such luminaries as Frank Sinatra, Elvis Presley, Michael Caine, Lance Reventlow, or the late James Dean, she will get out of it with a disarming charm.

On the other hand, Lana becomes angry when reporters ask her about her three unsuccessful marriages.

Her first husband was Jack Wrather III, son of tv and film producer Jack Wrather Jr. Lana was 16 and Jack was 18 at the time. The marriage lasted 26 days.

A year later Lana flew to Las Vegas and married Carl Brent, 36, who was Judy Garland's road manager. This lasted 10 months.

The third man was Steven Oliver, to whom Lana is married on "Peyton Place." According to one source, they met in the afternoon and left for a Las Vegas wedding that night.

Lana's future seems full of problems. How well she will do in films and tv is still a big question.

The only thing that seems certain is that, no matter what the future holds, the Wood sisters will remain forever inseparable. ◆

"Special Delivery from Heaven"

To: The Kennedy Family
From: John Fitzgerald Kennedy

1917—1963

Sorry I had to leave right away,
I look down at you and smile every day.
Little Patrick asks to say "Hi,"
I love you, I'm happy, so please don't cry.

And Caroline I'd like to say,
How proud Daddy was of you that day.
When you stood like a lady and watched me go by,
And doing as Mommy did, you tried not to cry.

Little John, now you're the big man,
So take care of Mommy the best you can.
You were just like a soldier—that salute was so brave,
Thanks for the flag that you placed on my grave.

And Jackie, there was no time for goodbye,
But I'm sure you could read the "Farewell" in my eyes.
Watch over our children and love them for me.
I'll treasure your love through eternity.

So please carry on as you did before,
'Til all of us meet on Heaven's bright shore.
Remember I love you, remember I care,
I'll always be with you, though you don't see me there.

Love,
Jack
